Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

The Dragon Boat Festival, also known as Duanwu Festival, is celebrated on the fifth day of the fifth lunar month, a tradition that dates back to ancient China. The festival is primarily observed in China and in Chinese communities around the world to commemorate the life and death of the famous Chinese scholar Qu Yuan. The main attractions of this festival include dragon boat racing and eating zongzi, which are rice dumplings wrapped in bamboo leaves.

According to legend, Qu Yuan was a loyal minister who drowned himself in the Miluo River as a protest against the corruption of the era. Local villagers raced out in their boats to save him or at least retrieve his body. When they couldn't find him, they threw rice dumplings into the river so that the fish would eat them instead of Qu Yuan's body. This act is the origin of the dragon boat races and the tradition of eating zongzi.

Today, dragon boat races are the highlight of the festival, with teams paddling in harmony in elaborately decorated boats to the beat of drums. These boats are typically adorned with dragon heads and tails, and the races symbolize the community's attempt to rescue Qu Yuan. Besides the races, families gather to make and eat zongzi, with fillings that vary by region, including sweet bean paste, egg yolk, or braised pork.

The festival also includes various other activities intended to protect against evil and disease for the rest of the year. It is common for people to wear perfumed medicine pouches, hang mugwort and calamus on their doors, and drink realgar wine, all practices believed to promote health and well-being.

While the Dragon Boat Festival celebrates Chinese culture and heritage, it also serves as a reminder of the importance of loyalty, patriotism, and the community spirit.
