Last summer, my father took my younger brother, Eddie, and me to Vietnam for ten days. During our trip, we went to a tourist attraction called Black Lady Mountain (Núi Bà Đen in Vietnamese), over 900 meters above sea level. The weather in June was hot and humid, so I was a little frustrated because I didn't think that I was fit to climb up such a high mountain.

Initially, the mountain appeared small from a distance, but as we approached, it revealed its enormous size. Upon arrival, I was thrilled to discover a cable car available, which meant we wouldn't have to take the stairs up. However, my joy was short-lived as my dad insisted that we climbed the steps in order that it would "build character" and give us a nature walking experience.

Throughout the climb, we encountered various small animals and unique plants, and I came to realize that my dad was right. Despite feeling exhausted when we reached the summit, being outdoors in the fresh air was absolutely great. We spent some quality time walking around the beautiful temple and some statues on top of the mountain, and the breathtaking view of the landscape below left me speechless. We talked to other tourists, and they were happy to share some helpful information on the mountain. The monkeys living near the temple were a bit aggressive and mischievous; it was hilarious when one stole a visitor's burger.

The descent from the mountain was through an extended slide, similar to an amusement park ride. I shared a small cart with Eddie, who was terrified and screamed so loudly that my dad got worried. However, the experience was scary but fantastic, so I really wanted to go for another round.

Overall, it was a marvelous trip, and I would love to revisit the mountain. Next time, though, I prefer taking the cable car up or choosing a cooler day for the journey.

During my recent vacation at a beautiful resort on the beach in Cambodia, I had some unforgettable experiences. When I arrived, the staff greeted me and other guests warmly and offered me some complimentary drinks. I was amazed because they spoke English fluently. The resort was well-operated, and everything seemed perfect.

However, one morning, I woke up to find that the iron in my room was broken. I needed to iron my clothes for an important event that day. I called the reception, and they said they would send me another iron in about 20 minutes. While waiting, I decided to explore the resort. As I wandered around, I noticed a sign Resort Laundry Service. Because of having some clothes that needed cleaning, I decided to give it a try. I dropped off my clothes and swiped my room key to pay for the service.

Later that day, as I was walking back to my room, I heard some yelling at the swimming pool area. Curious, I rushed over and tried to find out what was going on. A little boy had accidentally fallen in and was yelling for help because he couldn't swim. It was dangerous because no adults were there, so I quickly jumped into the pool and rescued him. The boy was scared to death, but he was all right.

Despite the hot humid weather, I decided to spend the rest of the day lounging by the pool. As I was relaxing, I couldn't help but reflect on the events of the day.
