In the late 19th century, the women's movement occurred in many developed countries. It is said to begin in Western societies and then quickly spread over the world. During the movement, women fought against inequality in education, employment, reproductive rights, etc. Their uprising was the inevitable result of such a long period of being subdued. The victims of the temporarily old society were not only women from poor families (24)_____ not permitted to express their own ideas. To these people, life seemed to last endlessly without freedom and joyfulness. Therefore, their reaction was considered as the revolution in recognising their contributions and narrowing the huge gender gap between males (25)_____. The victory of the feminist movement gave birth for the new era of independence, liberty, and happiness for all women globally. Since then, women have legally gone to school, (26)_____, and been admitted to most social institutions and organisations, which had been considered extremely luxurious things for them. Although gender inequality has been substantially reduced over the past decades, there are still a few places where women do not have their entitlement, young girl children are completely illiterate and mature ones cannot work and (27)_____. How to help them to be released from the culturally regional oppression is (28)_____. However, it is believed that this issue is going to be resolved soon. (word count: 239)

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the following questions.

The Internet has profoundly changed education in many ways. For one, it has offered more opportunities for people of all ages and personalities to learn new things according to their interests. Research has shown that shy students benefit more from online learning than from face-to-face classes. There are study forums where they can raise their voice without the fear of speaking in front of classmates.

Many people are taking online courses because they're more cost-saving and convenient than in-person classes. For example, if you want to take an English course while working, an online course will better suit your schedule. The Internet offers many free English learning websites; some websites are fee-paying but usually have better learning materials specifically designed for different groups of learners.

For those advantages, many schools are redesigning their learning spaces to enable online learning. How should learners prepare themselves for effective online learning? First, they have to learn how to use learning tools so that they can find resources and clearly understand instructions. Second, they need to manage their time seriously. Cyber-learning fails if learners don't spend enough quality time on their learning. Another piece of advice is to find one or more companions, whether among your real-life friends or other online learners. This may motivate you to make progress. (word count: 215)
