PRACTICE TEST 4

A. There are a myriad of lifestyle issues affecting the youth of today. Such is the pressure heaped on many school-goers to achieve academic excellence by their parents that these 1 _____ (real) expectations are causing children to become hopelessly depressed. Indeed, some, in their 2 _____ (despair) to escape and their sense of guilt at being unable reach the levels of success demanded of them by their 3 _____ (push) parents, either rebel in what is 4 _____ (amount) to a cry for help, or, worse still, engage in 5 _____ (harm). It is no coincidence that suicide rates, expecially amongst young males, have been rising steadily for some time now. These are tough times to be a teen.

Then there are those who get hooked on the internet; the 6 _____ (virtue) world becomes their reality. For these teens, their social circle shrinks 7 _____ (drama) until, at last, their friendship sphere is limited solely to their online 8 _____ (bud). Not alone do they commonly suffer from sleep 9 _____ (private) on account of their destructive addiction to game play and net-surfing, their behaviour may become so 10 _____ (err) and peculiar over time as to be considered 11 _____ (social) . And while they sit at their computer screens hidden away in splendid isolation from the real world, such is the lack of exercise they get that their calorie intake far exceeds what is necessary for them to maintain a stable weight. In essence, due to their sedentary lifestyle, their weight 12 _____ (rocket) until such time as they become morbidly obese.

B. The standard of television programming produced in this country is in terminal decline. The 1 _____ (shed) has become a meaningless term confined in its 2 _____ (apply) to 3 _____ (go) days when adult content felt the full force of censorship and was not allowed to appear on the box until after 9:00 p.m. Nowadays, however, it seems anything goes any time. And, truth told, whatever anything is, it seldom 'goes' for much longer than a half hour or so at any rate before it is interrupted by a commercial break. And don't even get me started on those appalling 4 _____ (inform) most of the networks run right the way through the night, one after another, for up to thirty minutes at a time. It is truly painful. Terrestrial television is now, as far as I am concerned, a laughing stock. All the quality has been bought up by the satellite networks, with their big-money weight behind them, but even here 5 _____ (pick) are slim. In protest at the dire state of things, I have become a converted 6 _____ (net). I look to the web now to find good content. There, I can find just enough 7 _____ (run) of quality programmes to prevent myself from falling into utter despair and pining for the good old days of 8 _____ (year).

C. In January 2001, the 1 _____ (govern) Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) issued its latest report on climate change. Climate models worked out by giant super-computers had become far more reliable since the previous report in 1995 and allowed them to 2 _____ (praise) the earlier projections for global warming. Their conclusions were that something very serious is happening and that it cannot be a natural process. The 1990s was the hottest decade for 1,000 years and the Earth is warming faster than at any time in the last 10,000 years. According to the report, human activities are 3 _____ (equivocate) to blame for the temperature rise. The burning of fossil fuels releases carbon dioxide and, due to deforestation, there are fewer trees to absorb this gas and recycle it back into oxygen. Methane 4 _____ (concentrate) have also gone up dramatically because of increases in rice culture and 5 _____ (cattle), both of which generate methane from 6 _____ (compose) vegetation. These greenhouses gases trap heat in the Earth's atmosphere and cause the temperature to rise. In the worst case, the resulting melting of ice-caps and glaciers would cause sea levels to rise by up to 88 cm, endangering the homes and 7 _____ (lively) of tens of millions of people who live in low-lying regions.

Unfortunately, there is far greater 8 _____ (unanimous) among the world's scientists over the issue than among politicians. As long ago as 1990, the IPCC recommended a 60% reduction in carbon dioxide 9 _____ (emit), as the basic level required to return the planet's climate to a healthy level. Governments globally failed to 10 _____ (act) these proposals. Now that the dangers have been reaffirmed by the latest report, it is high time that governments took an active interest in exploring alternative, renewable energy sources.

D. People intuitively recognize the importance of self-esteem to their psychological health, so it isn't particularly remarkable that most of us try to protect and enhance it in ourselves whenever possible. What is remarkable is that attention to self-esteem has become a(n) 1 _____ (commune) concern, at least for Americans, who see a favorable opinion of oneself as the central psychological source from which all manner of positive outcomes spring. The corollary, that low self-esteem lies at the root of individual and thus 2 _____ (society) problems and 3 _____ (function), has sustained an ambitious social agenda for decades. Indeed, campaigns to raise people's sense of self-worth abound. Consider what transpired in California in the late 1980s. Prodded by State Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, Governor George Deukmejian set up a task force on self-esteem and personal and social responsibility. Vasconcellos argued that raising self-esteem in young people would reduce crime, teen pregnancy, drug abuse, school 4 _____ (achieve) and pollution. At one point, he even expressed the hope that these efforts would one day help balance the state budget, a prospect predicated on the observation that people with high 5 _____ (regard) earn more than others and thus pay more in taxes. Along with its other activities, the task force assembled a team of scholars to survey the relevant literature. The results appeared in a 1989 volume 6 _____ (title) The Social Importance of Self-Esteem, which stated that "many, if not most, of the major problems plaguing society have roots in the low self-esteem of many of the people who make up society." In reality, the report contained little to support that assertion.

The blurred 3 _____ (image) of Impressionist paintings seems to stimulate the brain's amygdala, for instance. Since the amygdala plays a crucial role in our feelings, that finding might explain why many people find these pieces so 4 _____ (move).

Could the same approach also shed light on abstract twentieth-century pieces, from Mondrian's geometrical blocks of colour, to Pollock's 5 _____ (seem) haphazard arrangements of splashed paint on canvas? 6 _____ (sceptical) believe that people claim to like such works simply because they are famous. We certainly do have an inclination to follow the crowd. When asked to make simple 7 _____ (perceive) decisions such as matching a shape to its rotated image, for example, people often choose a definitively wrong answer if they see others doing the same. It is easy to imagine that this 8 _____ (mental) would have even more impact on a fuzzy concept like art appreciation, where there is no right or wrong answer.

F. Pop art was a(n) 1 _____ (convention) art style in which 2 _____ (common) objects such as comic strips, soup cans and road signs were used as subject matter, and were often incorporated into the work. The pop art movement was largely a British and American cultural phenomenon of the late 1950s and '60s. Art critic Lawrence Alloway, referring to the prosaic 3 _____ (icon) of its painting and sculpture, named the movement pop art. It represented an attempt to return to a more objective and 4 _____ (universe) accepted form of art after the dominance in both the United States and Europe of the highly personal abstract 5 _____

(express). The art form was iconoclastic, rejecting the 6 _____ (supreme) of the 'high art' of the past and the 7 _____ (pretend) of other contemporary avant-garde art. Pop art became a cultural institution because of its close reflection of a particular social situation and because its easily 8 _____ (comprehend) images were immediately exploited by the mass media. Although the critics of pop art describe it as sensational and non-aesthetic, its proponents saw it as an art that was democratic and not 9 _____ (discriminate), bringing together both connoisseurs and untrained inexperienced viewers. Even though public reaction to pop art was 10 _____ (favour), it found critical acceptance as a form of art suited to the highly technological, mass media-oriented society of western countries.

AUTUMN COLORS

A new term is rapidly gaining recognition in the American language - a 'leaf peeper' is someone who, in autumn, is on the __*outlook*__ (1. LOOK) for areas where the leaves of deciduous trees have changed colour. In New England, in the USA, 'leaf peeping' is big business, generating millions of dollars annually. The first report that leaves are changing colour sets off an __*invasion*__ (2. INVADE) of 'peepers' thus causing serious obstruction on some roads. Thousands of people log on to websites in their __*eagerness*__ (3. EAGER) to find the location of the trees that have foliage in the most __*glorious*__ (4. GLORY) colours. The popularity of 'leaf tourism' is well established in New England, and the changing colours of autumn provide an annual talking (5. TALK) point. The colours vary from year to year since the intensity (6. INTENSE) of the colour is dependent (7. DEPEND) on the chemical composition of the dying leaves. After a long dry summer, leaves often turn bright red, while cloudy autumn days will produce less spectacular yellows. If climate change leads to increasingly (8. INCREASE) hot, dry summers in the northern hemisphere, then countries in Europe can expect summers not unlike (9. LIKE) those across the Atlantic. They will then enjoy a kaleidoscope of seasonal (10. SEASON) colour to rival the deep reds and blazing oranges seen in New England.

5. Supply the correct form of the words in brackets.

Vitamins, taken in tiny doses, are a major group of organic compounds that regulate the mechanisms by which the body converts food into energy. They should not be confused with minerals, which are ___(1)___ in their makeup. Although in general the naming of vitamins followed the ___(2)___ order of their ___(3)___, the nomenclature of individual substances may appear to be somewhat random and ___(4)___ . Among the 13 vitamins known today, five are produced in the body. Because the body produces sufficient quantities of some but not all vitamins, they must be supplemented in the daily diet. Although each vitamin has its specific ___(5)___ and cannot be replaced by another compound, a lack of one vitamin can interfere with the processing of another. When a lack of even one vitamin in a diet is continual, a vitamin deficiency may result.

The best way for an individual to ___(6)___ a necessary supply of vitamins is to maintain a balanced diet that includes a ___(7)___ of foods and provides adequate quantities of all the compounds. Some people take vitamin supplements, predominantly in the form of tablets. The vitamins in such supplements are ___(8)___ to those in food, but an adult who maintains a balanced diet does not need a daily supplement. The ingestion of supplements is recommended only to correct an existing deficiency due to ___(9)___ diet, to provide vitamins known to be lacking in a restricted diet, or to act as a therapeutic measure in medical treatment. ___(10)___, caution must be exercised with fat-soluble substances, such as vitamins A and D, because, taken in gigantic doses, they may present a serious health hazard over a period of time.

Vivaldi's concertos provided a model for this genre throughout Europe, affecting the style even of his older contemporaries. Vivaldi was the first composer who (8) _____ (CONSISTENT) used the ritornello form that became standard for the fast movements of concertos. The ritornello was a section that recurred in (9) _____ (DIFFER) keys and was played by the full orchestra. It alternated with soloist-dominated sections (episodes) that in his works were often virtuosic in character. He virtually established the three-movement format for the concerto and was among the first to introduce cadenzas for soloists. His opus 8 concertos entitled The Four Seasons are early examples of (10) _____ (ORCHESTRA) program music. Like much of his music, they are marked by vigorous rhythms and strong contrasts.

As part of the 'Facebook generation', we have grown up in a world where access to the internet is constantly at our fingertips and we're able to connect with people at the touch of a button. Nowadays, it's become (0) _____ (INCREASE) common to offer guests the wifi password along with a cup of tea when they come round to visit. We have become addicted to our smartphones.

Your answers

0. increasingly

1. _____

Of course, smartphones are (40) _____ (DENY) useful and have revolutionised our lives in so many ways. Thanks to thousands of apps available to download, we're now able to do almost anything when we're out and about. However, it seems a shame that these addictive pieces of technology are slowly beginning to take over our lives. It's so easy to become (41) _____ (DEPEND) on our phones, whether it's to find your way around with the map application or even just check the time. As a result we're becoming more (42) _____ (SOCIABLE), choosing to consult the internet rather than talk (43) _____ (FACIAL) with other human beings.

Even when we're socialising, it seems most of us struggle without our phones at arm's reach. Phones were invented to keep us more connected, and indeed they have done just that. We can now get in contact by an endless list of social media outlets, yet this means we're starting to lack genuine contact with each other. People are connecting more and more across screens rather than in person, even when it comes to relationships - dating apps and websites are more popular than ever before. Recently, an artist released a series of images (44) _____ (DEPICTION) people in social situations and edited out their smartphones and tablets. The result was a collection of powerful images that have, perhaps (45) _____ (IRONY), gone viral. They force people to wake up to the fact that we are no longer interacting properly with each other.

QUALIFY) and responsibilities depend on what tasks a (7. PART) organization needs a webmaster to perform.

To (8. SPECIAL) the job description of a webmaster, one needs to identify the hardware and software the website the webmaster will manage is running on. Different type of hardware and software require different skill sets to manage them. Another key factor is whether the website will be running internally (at the firm itself) or externally (renting shared space on the company servers). Finally, the responsibilities of a webmaster also depend on whether he or she will be working (9. DEPEND), or whether the firm will provide people to help. All of these factors need to be considered before one can create an accurate webmaster job description. Webmaster is one type of Internet career requiring (10. Miserable, overworked, insecure – The British work the longest hours in Europe and express the least job satisfaction. However much richer they are, they are becoming more (1. content)_____ with work every year. What is the point of economic success if it is matched by growing (2. happy)_____? Like dumb oxen we work harder than everyone else – a third of men work more than 50 hours a week – but we're not smarter. For more than a century factory acts and ever shorter working hours marked the onward march of (3. industry)_____ progress. Now social history has (4. appear)_____ gone into reverse.

In an annual study Professor Cary Cooper of the Manchester School of Management revisits 5000 managers, from CEOs down to juniors. He finds them (5. increase)_____ anxious about their lives. This is hardly (6. surprise)_____ since half of them work most evenings and a third work most weekends. Despite falling (7. employ)_____, people feel their own job or status is under threat because they suffer more turmoil at work than they did five years ago. Restructuring, downsizing and radical changes at work mean a life of constant upheaval, and the current merger epidemic leads to (8. predict)_____ job loss. Most feel that this uncertainty damages their home life and health as well as their company's (9. produce)_____. ALBERT EINSTEIN

Albert Einstein's work has enormously (1)(BROAD).....our understanding of the universe and has had a (2)(CONSIDER)..... impact on all our lives. Thanks to his equation $E = mc^2$, we now know that energy and mass (or matter) are directly related to each other. To a very great (3)(EXTEND)....., it is Einstein who is responsible for our now knowing that space and time are actually one thing: space-time. (4)(ADD)....., without $E = mc^2$ we would not have nuclear power – and nuclear weapons – today.

Einstein did not become famous because of $E = mc^2$, which was first published in 1905. At the time, his paper was (5)(LARGE).....ignored, even by most scientists. Just how readable should a popular science book be? This may seem an old question, but there is an important issue at stake here, as was made clear at the recent Aventis Science Book Awards, when jury chairman Lewis Wolpert (1)..... The biologist believes too many science writers are now running scared of (2) (complex). As he pointed out, the public does not expect James Joyce or T.S. Eliot to be easy follow. Indeed, readers positively relish these authors' intricacies, (3) (labyrinth) excesses and abstruse metaphors. So why then do we exclude science writers from such (4)..... (expect), Wolpert asked, why do we presume that they – and only they - adopt the approach of the lowest common literary denominator and grind down the (5).....(FINITE) subtleties of the universe to an easy - to – digest pap?

In sort, science books should be written to produce as much cerebral sweat as do Ulysses and The Wasteland, a point (6).....
