Tourists and locals in the capital city of Hanoi will have an opportunity to enjoy a feast of dazzling light and traditional music and a taste of Vietnamese educational history while engaging in the night tour to the Van Mieu - Quoc Tu Giam (Temple of Literature) in the heart of Hanoi. The service, which was officially launched on October 29, is the fourth tour of this kind in Hanoi, following those the Hoa Lo Prison Relic, the Thang Long Imperial Citadel, and the Vietnam Museum of Literature.

The Temple of Literature's night tour offers tourists an entirely different experience as compared to the daytime visit since it uses technology and lighting, rather than the theatrical format applied to other tours. Visitors are taken to different areas in the Temple of Literature, from the gate to various key places inside the complex. A centerpiece of the tour is in the Thai Hoc Hall, which is transformed on the theme of "Tinh hoa dao hoc" (Essence of Education) by the sparkling lighting system and 3D-mapping technology, telling the stories about the history of the first Vietnamese imperial university. Meanwhile, Khue Van Cac (Constellation of Literature Pavilion) serves as a venue for stellar traditional music performances; Vuon Bia Tien Si (Laureate Stelae Garden) gives visitors a better insight into the list of scholar figures with support of the mapping presentation; and Dai Thanh spotlights images of examination hall through the virtual reality technology.
