12 Then and now

Land transport in Việt Nam – then and now

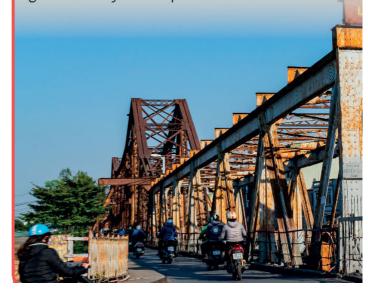

Over the years, there have been significant changes to land transport in Việt Nam. People used to rely heavily on bicycles, but modern forms of transport have replaced them.

Bicycles

Had bicycles been an important means for many years before the advent of motorised vehicles? This was definitely true because they had played an essential role in Vietnamese daily life by the mid-20th century. Bicycles were used to get around, commute to work, transport goods to markets, and even to travel long distances. Streets full of bicycles made it a common sight.

Motor vehicles

As the economy grew, there was a need for faster and more efficient transport. This led to the introduction of motorbikes due to their speed and convenience. The motor vehicles on the roads had not increased dramatically until the 1990s. At the time, the government was trying to invest in new infrastructure, like highways and railways. People then had a greater variety of transport choices.

Modern-day vehicles

In recent years, the increasing number of cars resulting from economic development has been a new sign of social status. Cars, along with motorbikes, are one of the main vehicles for many city dwellers. In addition, tech-based services are becoming more competitive, providing people with a convenient and affordable way to move from one place to another.

- Study these sentences from the text. Then choose the correct options to complete the
 - 1 Had bicycles been an important means for many years before the advent of motorised vehicles?
 - 2 They had played an essential role in Vietnamese daily life by the mid-20th century.

16 Then and now

THINK! What are the best and worst experiences you've had on holiday?

1 Read Mary's blog post. Was this a good, bad or mixed experience for her? Why?

An eventful day

We had a great camping holiday in Germany last week, but there were some ups and downs! Tuesday was definitely the biggest adventure.

It all started at about seven in the morning, when my dad decided that we should go to a theme park. While we were still waking up, he started packing the car for a day out, including food for a picnic.

The moment that we left the campsite, it started raining, and by the time we arrived at the theme park two hours later, it was terrible. We couldn't even walk to the entrance. So we stayed in the car and ate our sandwiches. Meanwhile, my baby brother started crying because we had forgotten his teddy. Perfect! After that, we drove straight back to the campsite again.

When we finally got back there, we'd been in the car for five hours. Amazingly, just as we were getting out of the car, the rain stopped. So we went for a swim in the lake and played some football with the other kids at the campsite. Afterwards we had a barbecue, and we stayed outside chatting until one in the morning, so it was all OK in the end.

2 Read the text again and answer the questions.

- 1 Who had the idea to go to a theme park?
- 2 Why didn't they go into the theme park?
- 3 What were they doing when the rain stopped?

Living without waste

Lauren Singer has always been interested in the environment. After finishing her degree in environmental studies, she made up her mind to live a 'zero-waste' lifestyle because she was shocked that people are so wasteful. Since then, she hasn't used any 'disposable' products. 1 She either reuses containers or buys products without packaging. She even makes her own toothpaste. She has managed to reduce her waste so much that two years of her rubbish filled only one 500 gram jar! Lauren has been blogging about her lifestyle for the last few years and her blog gives useful advice and ideas for people who want to reduce their impact on the environment.

Living without money

Daniel Suelo is a modern nomad – he's moneyless and homeless, so he moves around to find food and shelter. He sometimes looks after people's houses for two or three weeks, but usually he lives in the caves of Utah, in the USA. When he was younger he worked as a cook, but he dropped out of society and hasn't used money since 2000. He says he's happier since he made his decision.

Mark Boyle is another moneyless man – he hasn't used money since 2008. Mark lives in a caravan in a field and grows his own vegetables. ² He says that he's never been happier or healthier.

Focus on schools: making your mind up

Secondary school students in Ireland have the option in fourth year to do a Transition Year (TY). This one-year programme helps prepare students for their Leaving Certificate in fifth and sixth years, and for life beyond.

In TY, students get the chance to do more varied cultural and social activities while deciding what to study for the next two years. TY coordinators give careers advice and get in touch with local businesses to organise work experience for students. Most students say that they get a lot out of the year.

Transition Year aims

Personal and social skills

Get into something new, like a sport or a hobby.

Get to know people better in teambuilding activities.

Community action

 Get involved with projects and charities. Become an active and responsible citizen.

• Get together with people from the local community.

Work and career

 Get used to the world of work – students do work experience with two different companies or organisations.

 Get ready to choose options for fifth year – students try out different school subjects.

Survey report: Holiday studying

In our survey at school, we asked people 'Should students have a small amount of studying in the holidays?' Of the forty students who participated, 60% said 'yes' and 30% said 'no'. However, 10% of people were undecided.

Those in favour said that it is helpful for students to have some work in the holidays so that they don't forget everything. In contrast, those against commented that students have too much work when they are at school and they need a break. Another comment from the 'yes' side was that students can maintain the concentration by doing work little and often, whereas people who said 'no' think that it's sad to consider the holidays as an extension of the school year. Those who were undecided didn't make comments, although one student said 'It depends on the amount of work.'

All in all, the results indicate that the majority of students think that a small amount of studying in the holidays can be helpful.

Influencers: the online stars who set the trends

An interview with marketing specialist Harper Tanner

Who or what are influencers?

Erm ... people who have influence on others, obviously. Young people who are stars on social media have thousands, sometimes millions, of followers. Companies pay them a lot of money to advertise products because they are like internet celebrities. A famous example from the UK is Zoella – she has about ten million subscribers to her beauty channel.

Really? How does that work?

OK. Imagine I'm a fashion blogger or a popular gamer or someone who makes really funny videos. Marketing companies give me a product because of my popularity on social media. I recommend the product and my followers think, 'Hey, that must be cool because Harper likes it. I'm going to buy it.' The marketing company pays me, and everyone is happy.

Give me more examples.

OK. A music promoter sends a song to an internet star who maybe dances to the song. The music company then pays for every view or 'like' which that video gets. Or clothes retailers give lots of their products to influencers since they hope the influencers will wear or just mention their stuff online. Influencers never pay for clothes or makeup or skateboards or games. Marketing companies are THROWING stuff at them all the time.

Hey, I've got this blog and nobody's throwing stuff at me!

Well, you'll need a minimum of 400,000 followers. That doesn't happen overnight, but when you are successful, you can earn big money. Some vloggers started earning when they were still at school! Online marketing is MASSIVE. Companies want to reach young customers as they spend a LOT and they stick with the brands that they like.

OK. Thanks, Harper. I'm going to find some followers. See you online.

Good luck!

99/8A Lê Lơi Street Hồ Chí Minh City 11th September, 20...

Dear Tony,

It's been a while since we last talked. How are you doing at school? Hope you are having an awesome term.

Today, I'm glad to share my future career plans with you. I hope that you will support me as well as give me some pieces of advice. I've always been interested in the healthcare industry and helping people in need. After much thought and consideration, I'd like to pursue a career in nursing in the future. I believe nursing is a both rewarding and challenging career that will allow me to make positive impacts on people's lives, I'm thrilled about the prospect of working in a dynamic environment where I'll have the chance to develop every day. I love not only meeting new people but also building lasting relationships with patients and colleagues. To achieve my career goals, I'll enrol in a nursing programme at a college. I'm confident that with the right training and experience, I'll be able to make a meaningful difference in the lives of those I care for.

I'd love to hear about your future career plans too. What are you interested in pursuing? Have you had any plans for your future career yet?

Thank you for being such a great pen pal of mine.

I look forward to hearing from you soon.

The emotions test

This is a photo of a woman who is afraid. The emotion on her face is fear. When psychologists showed a picture like this to a group of adults and a group of teenagers, 100% of the adults correctly identified the emotion. However, only 50% of teenagers recognised that the emotion was fear. Some thought that it was surprise, others thought that it was anger. The results of many studies seem to show that in our teenage years we are not always good at recognising emotions.

40 Feelings

If you've read my blog before, you already know that I'm an animal lover. My two dogs are the best four-legged friends in the world, and I've also adopted a long-haired, one-eyed cat with an attitude; she seems to know exactly what I'm thinking. So this month I wanted to ask a question: Can animals think and feel like we do?

In the 16th century, the philosopher René Descartes said that animals were like mechanical robots which didn't feel pain or have thoughts and feelings. Since then, opinions have changed, as scientists have spent a lot of time researching animals. Here are a few of the surprising things which they've observed:

 When an elephant dies, the other elephants in the group cover its body and stand next to it.
 They stay near the dead animal for days and seem broken-hearted. Members of the group will visit the place months and sometimes years later. It seems like they could be expressing their sadness. They might, perhaps, have emotions.

6 Suse IT! Work in groups. Ask and answer the questions.

- 1 Do you agree with the conclusion of the blog?
- 2 Have you heard of any other cases of animal intelligence or emotions?

LANGUAGE FOCUS • Possibility and certainty I can express possibility and certainty.

Whales act like they're happily in love.
 They embrace and play together. Some, like orcas, have one partner for life.

 Studies show that chimpanzees are sympathetic to each other; one chimpanzee will hug another chimpanzee if it is hurt.

• It's not only big-brained mammals which show sympathy. Crows, like elephants, stand in a group when one dies, and bring grass to cover the body. Scientists have also noted that mice appear worried when another mouse is in pain.

 Animals in a group certainly have different personalities; some are confident; some are shy; some are relaxed; others are more aggressive and assertive.

So what about Descartes? To me, it's pretty obvious that he was wrong. The evidence suggests that animals must feel something; they can't simply be like robots. Researchers are using brain scans to discover more about animal behaviour, so we may know more about their emotions in the future. For now, we should be open-minded and considerate towards animals. They might be thinking more than we realise.

 - 3 Do your parents ever ask you to turn your music down or to turn it off?
 - 4 What songs do you sing along to? Do you turn up the volume when you hear them?

The surprising stuff blog Music, mood and health

When we turn on the radio and hear a good song, we cheer up, but scientific studies have shown that music affects our brains and bodies in many more ways.

- 1 If you turn up the volume and sing along to your favourite songs, it's good for your heart and health. But if other people can hear the music from your headphones, you should turn down the volume it could cause you hearing problems.
- 2 If you listen to fast music while you work out, it can improve your fitness, and help you to speed up your running. But you mustn't listen to music when you're cycling because it could distract you and cause an accident.

- 3 Listening to music can help you to concentrate on your homework. But it's better without lyrics, so turn off the rap and start playing something more melodic.
- 4 Music therapy reduces anxiety and helps people to calm down. Relaxing music slows down your heart and breathing. It can also help reduce pain.

5 Learning to play an instrument can increase your IQ, because you have to use both sides of your brain.

THINK! In what kind of situations do people ask for advice on the internet?

Read the forum post. What advice does Kim give to Linh? What do you think of the advice?

Friends forum

I've just started at a new school and there's a group of people I hang out with. We have a laugh together, but it bothers me when they say that only 'sad' people study a lot. Last week they teased me when I got good marks in a history test. I'm not sure if I like that. Linh

Hey, Linh,

OK, well this is a slightly annoying situation, isn't it? But quite common, IMO. Let's think. What could you do? For a start you should probably ask these people why it's 'sad' to do well.

They might be having problems with some of the work. Hey – you could even offer to help them. What do you reckon?

What else? Are you meeting a lot of new people at the moment? I bet that there are LOADS of other people that you can be friends with if you want. Just be yourself, 'cos then I can guarantee that people will respect you. If you like studying, that's cool. You're obviously popular and you don't have to change who you are.

And one more thing. You did the right thing asking for advice. It's never a bad idea to talk to other people about it. Like they say, 'a problem shared is a problem halved'. Anyway, good luck and I hope that things work out for you.

 - 1 explore (v) _______ 2 develop (v) ______ 3 advance (v) _____ 4 invent (v) _____ 5 communicate (v) _____
- 4 Se IT! Work in groups. Brainstorm some ideas for the role of English in your studies.

Let's think about how English widens our knowledge when we surf the internet.

We could find huge information written in English by experts worldwide.

English and world inventions and discoveries

English is often considered to be the international language of science. The spread of English never stops going hand in hand with many world-changing discoveries and inventions. English proves to stand the test of time and becomes an effective tool in communication, in the documentation and sharing of discoveries and inventions.

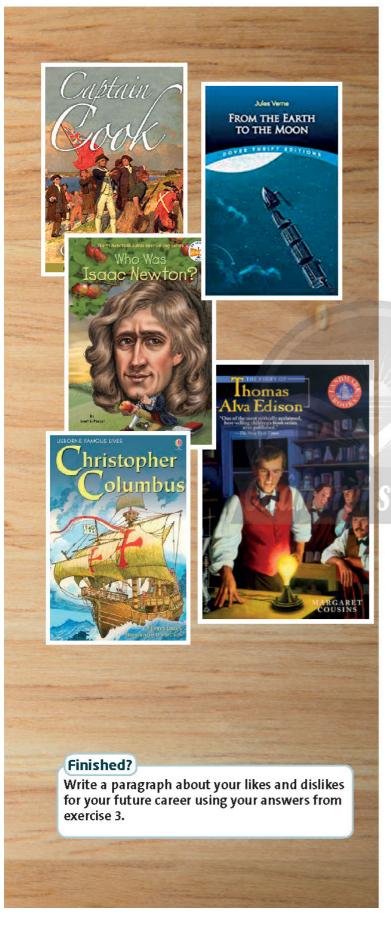

In communication, the use of English helps to promote international cooperation and aims to encourage significant scientific advancements. English enables scientists, engineers, explorers, and inventors worldwide to think of new ideas and to share their findings.

For ease of information storage and sharing, scientists like employing English to document and share the knowledge of inventions and discoveries, creating easy access to the development of various fields. The reaches of human thought are widened thanks to scientific publications (original or translated versions) on, for example, Isaac Newton's law of gravitation, Thomas Edison's key inventions including the light bulb and recorded sound, Christopher Columbus's and James Cook's explorations of new lands, etc. Therefore, translating a wide variety of books written by non-English speaking scientists into English allows the books to reach the masses.

It is hard to imagine life without the English language. If it were not for the English language, would there be another language to play the same role? Or do you wish you could invent a more effective alternative?

WHAT IF ...?

Live chat followed by our weekly podcast

This week - Send us your science questions about Earth and space.

If a coin fell on me from a skyscraper, would it kill me?

No. Gravity would accelerate it a bit, but a coin is flat and small, so it would fall quite slowly through the air. It wouldn't really hurt you. A metal biro WOULD be dangerous.

What would happen if everyone on Earth jumped at the same time? Not much. Tell me when you organise it!

What disease is the biggest threat to humans?

If we aren't careful, diseases will become resistant to antibiotics. So something which isn't dangerous now might be VERY dangerous in the future, and could become an epidemic.

- a) What will we do if the sun dies?
- b) If an astronaut played the guitar in space, would anyone hear it?
- c) Is there life on Mars or any other planet?
- d) What are the chances of a really big meteor hitting Earth?
- e) Which species causes the most deaths?
- f) How many stars and planets are there in the universe?
- g) How would we greet aliens if they came to Earth? Is there a plan?

Conditionals

Study sentences a-g and match them to the types of conditional 1-3.

THINK! Do you think English is useful in the field of science, e.g. space exploration? Why / Why not?

1 Read the passage and answer the questions.

- 1 How many reasons does the writer give in favour of the importance of English in the field of science?
- 2 Which of the opinions do you agree or disagree with?
- 3 Which conditional sentences does the writer use?

Do you think that English is the universal form of communication in science?

The need to integrate into the globalised world suggested finding a common language for better communication. Throughout the course of time, English has proved itself to be a key factor in connecting the world effectively. Many people suggest learning English to catch golden opportunities in professional life. Others may be against English thinking it poses challenges for non-English speakers. However, I am definitely in favour of English.

In the first place, English is widely spoken as an official language and as a second language in a large number of countries. Furthermore, in the field of science, English is currently the best way to share one's research findings with international scientists. English is, most of the time, a dominant language in the field of space exploration and on the International Space Station. Finally, English plays a crucial role in various industries including business, education, tourism, medicine, etc. If there were no common language, rather simple to learn like English, how would those scientists work together? Who can suggest creating a constructed language, with a simple grammatical structure and regular vocabulary, easy enough to master in the shortest time possible?

In summary, it is my opinion that English is vital, especially in scientific communication and collaboration worldwide.

Character-building courses for teens

Are you in the 15–18 age group? Do you want to do something different this summer? Here are some examples of summer courses where you can develop beneficial skills like teamwork, confidence and independence.

Tall Ships Adventures

If you're an adventurous teen who wants a challenge, this might be for you. It's suitable for people with different physical abilities, and previous sailing experience isn't necessary. You'll be in a small space with all kinds of people, so if you're sociable and easy-going, you'll love life on a tall ship.

Conservation Sites of Sea Turtles on Côn Đảo Island, Viêt Nam

These volunteering trips to turtle conservation sites are rewarding for nature-lovers who want to help save sea turtles. You can visit these amazing sites to see mother turtles lay eggs, look after the hatchlings, then release them to the sea safely. You need to be hard-working and responsible because you'll be doing important tasks alongside professional scientists.

Ms Ngó Phương Lan, Head, Personnel Department ABC Travel Group Hồ Chí Minh City

11th June, 20...

Dear Ms Ngô Phương Lan,

I am Lê Ngọc Điệp, a year 9 student. I am writing for further information about the volunteer tourism programme organised by ABC Travel Group advertised on your website last week.

This programme really interests me because I love gaining experience from tourism experts. I plan to study tourism at university so that I can become a tour guide, so it would be rewarding to have hands-on experience.

I was born with skills for problem solving and teamwork, which meets the requirements for a tour guide. Moreover, last summer's volunteer tourism programme gave me precious experiences on travelling software development.

I would be grateful if you could send me further information about the volunteer programme. I am about to take exams, but I will be available from 12th July.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

Lê Ngọc Điệp

If multilingual devices were widely used in daily life, would we need to learn English? The need to communicate worldwide 1 popularising the wide use of multilingual devices. However, I am definitely 2 learning English because human communication cannot be carried out by technology alone. Moreover, English is currently widely spoken and is one of the key languages of international business, scientific research, etc. Learning a foreign language including English has many benefits. 3 , it improves intelligence and memory, lowers the risk of brain aging and Alzheimer's disease. 4 develops soft skills such as problem-solving skill. 5 , knowing English has practical advantages in various situations. In fact, multilingual devices can translate accurately in terms of grammar, vocabulary but they cannot understand cultural contexts to know the real meaning of words in a certain context. In business settings, it can build stronger relationships when discussions are carried out through the same language without the use of a multilingual device. Mỹ Đình National Stadium is a multi-purpose sports arena located in Hà Nội. It is home to the Việt Nam national football team. With its seating capacity of over 40,000 people, the stadium hosted the 31st SEA Games in 2022. Don't miss it!

London for sports fans

London is such an interesting destination with lots of sports events that as a sports fan, there's no reason to get bored.

Here's my top selection.

Emirates Stadium

I'm not an Arsenal fan myself, but this is one of England's top football stadiums. Check out the murals outside, which celebrate some of the Gunners' most legendary players.

The Undercroft

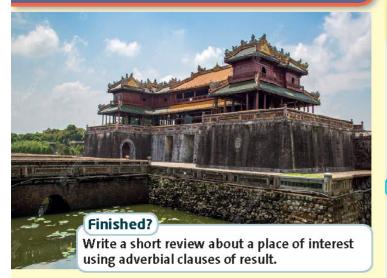

This skatepark next to the River Thames has been the heart of Britain's skateboarding community for over forty years. It's so popular that you can see some of the most talented skaters and BMXers in the country there.

Wembley Stadium

This is the biggest stadium in the UK, and in my opinion, it's the best! You can see the famous arch from miles away; it's taller than the London Eye. The stadium has such a powerful sound system that the music can be heard clearly from every corner.

Wimbledon

Lots of top tennis stars have played on Wimbledon's Centre Court, including the Williams sisters, Federer and Nadal. It's the only Grand Slam tournament on grass, so Wimbledon has its own hawk, Rufus, to scare away the pigeons. The grass on Wimbledon's Center Court is maintained so carefully that it's often considered the best grass court in the world. While you're here, try the classic dish — strawberries and cream.

74 On the streets

It's amazing to think of the treasures that might be hidden under your feet. Did you know that many ancient things are discovered accidentally by ordinary people in everyday locations?

In 2007, Britain's only complete Viking ship was located under a pub near Liverpool when the owner decided to renovate the building. Construction workers were excavating an area in order to build a car park, when they accidentally unearthed the 1,000-year-old ship. Thick mud had protected it.

The ship hasn't been removed yet, but archaeologists plan to restore it. They hope that it will be displayed in a museum one day.

Sometimes, archaeologists know what they're looking for and get lucky. The skeleton of King Richard III of England was lost for centuries, since the church where he was buried had been destroyed. But recently, the king's skeleton was uncovered in a car park in Leicester. It was examined by experts, who used DNA techniques to confirm the identity of the king.

Hidden History takes a closer look at some incredible stories of accidental or lucky discoveries.

HÔ CHÍ MINH CITY LANDMARKS

The Central Post Office

Located in the heart of the city, at 2 Công Xã Paris Street, District 1, the Central Post Office was built between 1886 and 1891, and it is still a working post office today. This magnificent building is a perfect example of Gothic and Renaissance styles.

Visitors can admire its grand interior with complex metalwork, and a vast collection of antique telephones and stamps. It's also a great place to purchase unique souvenirs, including postcards and stamps.

For those who want to learn more about the history and significance of Hồ Chí Minh City landmarks, the visitor centre located near the entrance of the Central Post Office is well worth a visit. Here, you can find information about the buildings' construction, as well as maps and brochures that will help you explore the area

The Notre Dame Cathedral

Just a short walk adoss the Central Post Office, you'll find the Notre Dame Cathedral, another must-see landmark. It was built in the late 19th century, and is considered one of the most beautiful examples of neo-Romanesque architecture in Southeast Asia.

The cathedral has the twin bell towers that reach a height of about 58 metres. Looking up, visitors can marvel at the stunning stained-glass windows and beautiful carvings. The cathedral can accommodate up to 1,200 worshippers. It's also a popular spot for photographers, as the stunning façade of the cathedral makes for a perfect backdrop.

One weekend, my family and I decided to go on a picnic at a nearby park. We packed a delicious spread of sandwiches, fruits, and snacks, and set off with excitement. However, things did not go as planned. As soon as we arrived at the park, we realised that it was overcrowded with noisy groups and there were no available picnic tables. After we walked around for a while to search for a spot, we finally found a small patch of grass under a tree and decided to make do with it. When we started unpacking our food, we noticed that there were swarms of mosquitoes buzzing around, making it impossible to enjoy our meal in peace. We tried to ward them off with mosquito repellent, but it was hopeless. To make matters worse, the weather suddenly turned hot. We didn't realise that we had forgotten to bring extra water until we were all sweating uncomfortably. We decided to pack up and leave earlier than planned, disappointed and frustrated with our outing. Despite our great efforts, it turned out to be our unpleasant picnicking experience, but we learned the importance of planning ahead and being prepared for unexpected challenges during outdoor activities.

 - 5 Some of the boxes contained pieces of Andy's art
 - 6 In contrast to the time capsules, Warhol's art is only concerned with famous people.

LIFE IN A BOX troi

An old postcard, a map to a party, used postage stamps, a magazine, a piece of junk mail, some wrapping paper and ribbon ... Does this sound like a work of art or a load of old rubbish? In fact, these are objects from a time capsule created by the world's most famous Pop artist, Andy Warhol. Before he died in 1987, Andy Warhol had filled more than 600 boxes with hundreds of thousands of objects from his everyday life. Even when he was very young, Warhol liked collecting things. At the age of nine, he collected photographs of film stars. There's nothing unusual about that. However, his later collections are truly astonishing. From 1974 onwards, he always kept a brown cardboard box next to his desk. Whether it was a letter from a film star or a receipt for some shopping, if he didn't want to get rid of an object, he put it into the box. As soon as he had finished a box, he closed it, wrote the date on it and started another.

Warhol thought that the boxes were valuable. 'Some day I'll sell them for $4,000 or $5,000 apiece,' 4 YOUR CULTURE Work in pairs. Ask and answer the questions about your country.

he wrote in his diary in 1986. Many people agree with him. The boxes are now at the Andy Warhol Museum in Pittsburgh, USA. In 2014, Warhol fans bought tickets to watch the opening of one of the final boxes. One fan had paid $30,000 to help open it. Was it worth it? It's true that many of the items are quite ordinary and appear worthless, but some of the boxes also contain rare objects: a drawing that Warhol never exhibited, a photograph that he took ... Some of the items are simply bizarre: a fan's toenail clippings, a piece of pizza, even a mummified foot. Warhol's art put everyday objects in the spotlight to make a comment on consumer society. Now, after his death, the everyday objects of Warhol's own life tell us a lot about the artist and society in the 20th century. So, was Warhol just a hoarder or an important chronicler of his time?

SHOP LESS, LIVE MORE

When did you last buy something? Maybe you are looking forward to a shopping trip at the weekend, but will it make you happy? In the short term, the answer might be yes. However, some people think it might not be good for our health and happiness in the long term.

One of the busiest shopping days of the year in the USA is Black Friday, the day after Thanksgiving, when many shops have special offers. Black Friday has spread around the world as large retailers try to increase consumer spending. In many countries, it is the start of the Christmas shopping period. However, not everyone will be queuing for a bargain. In 1992, Buy Nothing Day started in Canada as a protest against consumerism and the shopping frenzy that takes place at this time of year. The anti-consumerist organisation Adbusters promoted Buy Nothing Day and now more than sixty countries take part. Their message is simple: 'Participate by not participating'. For twenty-four hours on the fourth Friday of November, people leave their purses and wallets at home and do not buy anything at all. Some people choose to spend time with friends and family instead. Others join protests. But what's the point?

'Over-consumption has ecological consequences,' says Kalle Lasn, co-founder of Adbusters. 'Every single purchase that you make has some kind of an impact on the planet.' Making the products and transporting them to the shops use a lot of natural resources. When they are no longer in fashion, the products will end up on the rubbish heap. It all contributes to air and water pollution, the destruction of our environment and social inequality.

Reports suggest that the social impact of our spending habits is also serious. People in consumerist cultures are more likely to suffer from financial problems, stress and obesity. In order to pay for expensive products, people work long hours and therefore spend less time with family and friends.

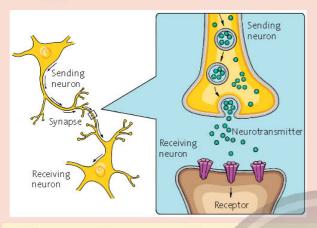

Critics of Buy Nothing Day say it's meaningless because people will just buy more the following day.
But the organisers argue that
Buy Nothing Day makes people think about the consequences of consumption and maybe makes some changes to their lifestyle.

- 4 Suse IT! Read the information about dopamine, serotonin and endorphin then choose the sentence from A-C to complete each paragraph.
 - A Exercise, laughter and spicy food can have the same effect.
 - B Your brain is rewarding you for eating all those calories!
 - C Like dopamine, it also helps you to sleep.

What makes us happy? Spending time with friends, playing our favourite sport, eating a big piece of cake, so on. Surprisingly, the things that make us happy haven't changed much since the time the first humans lived in caves and hunted to survive. Social contact, physical exercise and delicious food have always made human beings happy. Why? The answer is simple. Emotions helped the first humans to survive. When we do something that increases our chance of survival, such as making friends with someone or eating high-calorie food, our brain rewards us with feelings of happiness. We will repeat the action in the future to get the same feeling.

So, how exactly do our bodies produce feelings of happiness?

First, receptors in the mouth, eyes, nose, skin or ears receive information from our environment. For example, when we eat something delicious, taste receptors in the mouth receive the information and send electrical impulses. Cells called neurons carry the electrical impulses around the body. At the ending of the neuron cell, the impulse passes to another neuron cell, but the two cells do not touch. There is a small gap between the two cells called a synapse. The signal is carried across the synapse by special chemicals called neurotransmitters, which attach to receptor molecules on the receiving cell. The neurotransmitters dopamine, serotonin and endorphins have a very important role in creating the brain's reward for useful behaviour: happiness.

Dopamine

This neurotransmitter plays an important part in the brain's reward system. If you are enjoying a bar of chocolate, your body produces more dopamine and you feel good.

......Dopamine is also important for sleep.

Serotonin

An increase in serotonin makes you feel happy.

Your body produces serotonin when you exercise and when you are in the sun. In winter, when the days are shorter and there isn't much sunshine, a lot of people experience feelings of sadness.

Endorphins

If you hurt yourself or if you are feeling stressed, your body will produce endorphins to block the pain signals. But you don't need to be in pain to produce more endorphins:

 - 3 What cells produce antibodies?
 - 4 Who needs the yellow fever vaccine?
- 4 See IT! Work in pairs. Ask and answer the questions.
 - 1 Which diseases are mentioned in the text? What are they in Vietnamese?
 - 2 Which vaccinations are compulsory in Việt Nam? When do you have them?

Vaccines

Vaccines are used to protect the body against certain dangerous diseases before we come into contact with them. Global vaccination programmes have eradicated or controlled many deadly diseases around the world. For example, smallpox was officially eradicated in 1980.

What is in a vaccine?

Vaccines are biological substances that are made of the same micro-organisms that cause disease.

How do vaccines work?

Vaccines help develop the body's immunity by imitating a real infection. When the vaccine is introduced into the body, usually by injection or orally, the immune system reacts to the invading substance as if it were a real disease. The white blood cells produce antibodies to attack and destroy the substance in the vaccine. These antibodies then stay in the body and they create immunity. If the body comes into contact with the disease in the future, the immune system will respond immediately and protect against the infection.

Are all vaccines the same?

Different types of vaccines are used to immunise against different diseases.

When and how often do you need vaccines?

Most children are vaccinated against serious childhood diseases when they are babies. Several doses of the vaccines are needed to build up a complete immunity, so the vaccination is repeated three times. Some vaccines, such as the influenza vaccine, are only effective for a short time and need repeating every year. Others, like the yellow fever vaccine, are only necessary if you live in or visit a country where the disease exists.

 - 1 What are the natural environmental risks that people living in Mexico City face?
 - 2 What do the houses in the shanty towns lack?
 - 3 When is the air quality especially bad?
 - 4 How is the city laid out?

Mexico City:

Mexico City is the capital of Mexico. It's an exciting, noisy and busy place to live, but it's also vulnerable to natural disasters. It sits on an ancient lake surrounded by mountains and volcanoes and is in constant danger of earthquakes and flooding.

With a population of more than 18 million overcrowding is a major issue in Mexico City and the housing supply is inadequate. As a result, shanty towns, called barrios, have appeared. People who are desperate for somewhere to live in the city put up these shanty houses in any spare corner of land. The houses ought to have proper foundations, but they have been built quickly on top of the land and when the floods come, water sweeps the houses away. Disease spreads quickly in megacities like Mexico City - overcrowding could be a reason for this. Sometimes, as many as ten people live in one room, sharing toilets, water and cooking facilities. In the 21st century, we should have the technology to provide toilets and clean drinking water for everyone, but this

USE IT! Ask and answer the questions in

- 1 What do you think the Mexican government ought to do to improve the shanty towns?
- 2 How can they improve the air quality in the city?
- 3 What kind of public transport does a city need?
- 4 Would you like to live in a megacity? Why / Why not?

Pollution is another health hazard. Smog covers the city from November to May and tens of thousands of people die from health issues relating to it. A programme called Hoy No Circula has been introduced and cars must stay off the road for one day a week. The government is also trying to encourage commuters to find a different way to travel to work: there is a new bicycle sharing service called Ecobici and a Metrobus system.

Despite its problems, Mexico City is vibrant and lively with a rich cultural life, fantastic shopping, amazing restaurants and plenty for its citizens and visitors to do. There are more than two hundred museums and galleries and there is a wonderful zoo. Architecturally, it is very interesting with a wonderful checkerboard layout and splendid architecture, which dates from the 16th century.

I can speculate about historical artefacts.

The lost village of Skara Brae

Winter in the northern isles of Scotland is a stormy season. Every year, heavy rain and strong winds hit the coast of the Orkney Islands. In the winter of 1850, there was a storm on Mainland, the largest of the Orkneys. It caused terrible damage to the island, but it also revealed an amazing archaeological treasure. When the storm cleared, the outline of an ancient village . Since then, the site has been excavated and explored by archaeologists and they have made some remarkable discoveries.

The ancient village of Skara Brae was built more than 5,000 years ago and was probably 3 between around 3200 BC and 2200 BC. That makes it older than the Great Pyramid at Giza. It's easy to see why this period of history is called the Stone Age - the houses of Skara Brae and everything in them are made from stone.

The village is so well preserved that it has changed little in 5,000 years. The eight stone houses are connected by low 4. with stone doors. They all have a similar layout: one main room with a central fireplace and stone beds on both sides.

- 5 USE IT! Work in pairs. Speculate about the use of the following objects in the community of Skara Brae. Use the photos and the text to help you.

carved stone balls dresser needles red colouring material stone boxes

Opposite the entrance is a large stone dresser, a kind of cupboard. It sounds basic to today's visitor, but in the Stone Age these were warm and comfortable houses.

The archaeologists' investigations have given us lots of information about the people who lived at Skara Brae and what life was like for them. They were farmers who kept sheep and cattle. They also ate fish, and 5 deer. Every part of the animal was used, including the bones. The archaeologists found jewellery, hair pins, needles, bowls and cups, all 6 animal bones and stone. They also found stone pots that contained red colouring material and some mysterious carved stone balls.

Around 2200 BC, Skara Brae was 7. slowly covered by the earth and sands. We don't know why these people left their small community. It is possible that farming became more difficult because of changes to the environment. We also know that, as the Bronze Age 8. began to change and small farming communities broke up. Skara Brae was left to the winds.

People didn't use to have computers at home.

Frequency expressions

We use frequency expressions such as never, (not) usually, (not) often or (nearly) always to say how often something happens. They usually go before simple tenses or after the verb to be.

I'm always interested in new digital technology.

Some longer phrases like two or three times a week or every day tell us exactly how often something happens. They go at the end of the sentence or clause.

We chat two or three times a week.

Past perfect

Questions	Affirmative	Negative
Had we booked our holidays in advance?		We hadn't booked our holidays in advance.

We form the past perfect with the subject + had + past participle.

Usage

We use the past perfect to talk about an action in the past which finished before a more recent past action.

We went into town after we'd had lunch.

(First action = we had lunch:

second action = we went into town.)

We use after and before to link events in time, to show that one action follows another.

We took the apples back to the shop after we'd discovered that they were rotten.

Molly and Clara had eaten before they went out.

Past narrative tenses

Past simple

Questions	Affirmative	Negative
Did they play football after school?	They played football after school.	They didn't play football after school.
Did Alice go to Ireland on holiday?	Alice went to Ireland on holiday.	Alice didn't go to Ireland on holiday.

We form the past simple of regular verbs by adding -ed to the infinitive.

play -> played $study \rightarrow studied$

There are no spelling rules for past simple irregular verbs, and each one must be learned. Refer to the Irregular verbs list on page 107.

Usage

We use the past simple to describe an action which happened in the past and is completed.

I did my homework and then I went to sleep.

Past continuous

Questions	Af firmative	Negative
Was Lukas working at 7.00 p.m. yesterday?	Lukas was working at 7.00 p.m. yesterday.	Lukas wasn't working at 7.00 p.m. yesterday.
Were we exercising at the gym?	We were exercising at the gym.	We weren't exercising at the gym.

We form the past continuous with the subject + was / were + -ing form of the verb.

Usage

We use the past continuous to talk about an action that was in progress in the past.

'What were you doing at eight o'clock last night?'

"I was talking to my friend."

We use the past continuous and the past simple together when one action interrupts another. We use the past continuous to describe the action in progress and the past simple for the action that interrupts it.

We usually use while with the past continuous and when with the past simple.

I was searching for my keys when I found the earring. While I was looking through my photos, I came across a postcard from my friend Jana.

Time connectors

We can use the following time connectors to indicate how different time periods link together in a narrative:

afterwards = later

before = at an earlier time

by the time = not later than that time in the end, finally = at last just as = at the same time as meanwhile = at the same time as another thing is happening

the moment that = exactly at the time that until = up to the time when while = during the time that

Present perfect

Present perfect simple

Questions	Affirmative /	Negative
Have you made up your mind?	I've made up my mind.	I haven't made up my mind.
Has your sister tried out lots of sports?	My sister has tried out lots of sports.	My sister hasn't tried out lots of sports.

Usage

We use the present perfect when an action is complete.

We've played a fantastic game.

(= We've finished it.)

We often use the present perfect with verbs that have the idea of a short time or a single action: stop, finish, start, cut, break, die, lose, find, buy. Ivan has cut his finger.

Questions	Affirmative 🥏	Negative
Have you been travelling this month?	We've been travelling this month.	We haven't been travelling this month.
Has your dad been waiting for two hours?	My dad has been waiting for two hours.	My dad hasn't been waiting for two hours.

Present perfect continuous

Usage

We use the present perfect continuous when an action isn't complete and might continue.

We've been playing a fantastic game.

(= We haven't finished it and we'll continue playing it)

We often use the present perfect continuous with verbs that have the idea of a very long time or a repeated action: learn, try, rain, play, wait, work.

Karel and Markus have been working for ages!

for and since

We can use for and since with both the present perfect simple and continuous.

Since tells us when an action started.

He's been travelling since March.

For describes the duration of a state or action. It is followed by a period of time.

He's been travelling for five months.

100 LANGUAGE FOCUS REFERENCE

Present perfect vs. past simple

We use the present perfect when we talk about unfinished time periods or when we don't mention a time period. We often use it with this morning, this year etc. and for or since.

I've become more confident this year.

They've decided to study business.

He's had this laptop for two years.

(= He's still got it.)

We use the past simple to talk about finished time periods. We use it with expressions like when or ago.

I didn't feel confident when I was younger.

We did the business course two years ago.

I had a laptop in 2016.

(= I haven't got it now.)

Adverbial clauses and phrases of concession

We use adverbial clauses and phrases of concession to contrast two opposite meanings and show unexpected results or surprises.

Though, although and even though are followed by a clause.

We put on our jackets and went for a walk though it was rainy.

Although it's raining, it's still warm outside.

Though is more common than although in general and it is much more common than although in speaking. For emphasis, we often use even with though.

These students already know how to read even though they are still in kindergarten.

Despite and in spite of are followed by a gerund or noun phrase

In spite of having very little money, they are happy. Despite all my careful plans, a lot of things went wrong.

Expressing contrast

We use in contrast, whereas, however and although to express contrast.

I loved working in the bank. In contrast, Lee hated it. We like history, whereas Jessica thinks it's boring. Community work is fun. However, it's also hard work. I didn't really like the course, although it was useful.

Adverbial clauses and phrase of reason

We use because / as / since to indicate the reason for an action or event.

She never eats meat because she is a vegetarian As there was loud noise outside, my daughter couldn't sleep well.

Sophia went to bed early since she had a long day at work today

We use because of to indicate the cause of something. I could pass the exam successfully because of her help. Because of the typhoon, Danny couldn't go picnicking with his friends.

Future forms will

Questions	Affirmative	Negative
N. N. S. S. N. S. S. S. S. N. S.		We won't shop differently in a few years' time.

We form sentences with will using subject + will / won't + infinitive (without to).

Usage

We use will:

- 1 to make predictions about the future.

 People will buy most things online in the future.
- 2 to talk about spontaneous decisions and to make offers.

I'll help you order those clothes from the website.

going to

Questions	Af firmative	Negative
	She's / They're going to buy new clothes.	She isn't / They aren't going to buy new clothes.

We form sentences with be going to using subject + (negative) be + going to + infinitive.

Usage

We use going to when we plan or intend to do something in the future, but there isn't necessarily an exact date or time.

He's going to buy his favourite brand of trainers. We aren't going to study another language.

Conjunctions: as well as; both ... and; not only ... but also

We use as well as when we add more information. He plans to study marketing as well as advertising. We use not only ... but also and both ... and to say that something has two qualities.

That handbag is not only practical but also versatile.
This product is both cheap and well designed.

Possibility and certainty

There is only one form of may, might, could, can and must for all the subject pronouns.

I / You / He / She / It / We / You / They might be feeling stressed.

After may, might, could, can't and must, we use the infinitive without to.

Animals may feel sad when another animal dies.

We might learn more about this in the future.

Usage

We use may, might or could + infinitive to say that something is possible, but not certain. May, might and could have the same meaning.

We don't use couldn't when we talk about possibility. Experts might learn more about the feelings of animals.

(= We aren't certain.)

That scientist could be surprised by the results of the research.

(= We aren't certain.)

We use must + infinitive to say that we feel something is certain.

Your dog must be tired after such a long walk.

We use can't + infinitive to say that we feel something is impossible.

The animals are happily running around, so they can't be too stressed.

Ability: can, could, be able to

	Affirm ative	Negative
Present	I can run fast.	He can't concentrate.
Past	You could run fast.	We couldn't concentrate.
Future	She'll be able to run fast.	I won't be able to concentrate.

There is only one form of can, could and will be able to for all the subject pronouns.

I / You / He / She / It / We / You / They can swim very well

We use can and could with the infinitive of the verb without to.

I couldn't play the piano when I was younger.

We use be able to with modal verbs.

I might be able to play that song on the piano.

Usage

We use can, could and will be able to to express someone or something's ability to do something, or to say what is possible in a particular situation.

I'm playing on the games console at the moment, but you can use it after me.

I couldn't read very well when I was five. I won't be able to come later because I'm ill.

Advice and obligation: should, must, have to

There is only one form of should and must for all the subject pronouns.

i / You / He / She / it / We / You / They shouldn't listen to very loud music.

i / You / He / She / it / We / You / They must follow the school rules.

The third person singular affirmative form of have to is has to.

We have to read the article about music at home.

She has to go to her music lessons on Tuesdays. We use the auxiliary do to form the negative of have to: don't have to / doesn't have to.

We don't have to go to school on Sundays.
He doesn't have to do homework on Mondays.

Usage

We use should to give advice.

You should listen to classical music when you study.

You shouldn't watch TV when you're studying.

We use must and have to to talk about obligations, for example, a rule or a law.

You must wear a cycle helmet. It's very important.

You mustn't cycle on the pavement. It isn't allowed. We often use must to talk about something that the speaker decides is necessary.

You must do your homework now.

You mustn't be late for school.

We usually use have to when other circumstances make something necessary.

She has to go to the bakery.

(= Because she hasn't got any bread.)

We use don't have to to talk about something that it is not necessary to do.

I don't have to do any homework today.

(= Because I did it all yesterday.)

102 LANGUAGE FOCUS REFERENCE

Gerunds and infinitives

The gerund is the -ing form of a verb. We use gerunds: 1 as the subject of a sentence.

Running is good exercise for the human body.

2 after prepositions.

Astronauts must train before going into space.

3 after certain verbs, including avoid, can't stand, complete, dislike, don't mind, enjoy, finish, imagine, like, miss, practise, put off, recommend, regret, spend time, start, stop, waste time.

Can you imagine living on a different planet?

The infinitive is the to or base form of a verb. We use infinitives:

1 to explain the purpose of an action.

We used the telescope to look at the moon.

2 after adjectives.

It's interesting to talk about the universe.

3 after certain verbs including aim, decide, help, hope, intend, learn, need, plan, teach, tend, want.
Esther wants to study astrophysics.

Conditionals, wish

Conditional sentences have two parts: the if clause and the main clause. The if clause establishes the condition and the main clause establishes the result.

The if clause can come in the first or second half of the sentence. If it is second, we don't use a comma.

If we don't experiment, we won't learn.

We won't learn if we don't experiment.

We can use unless to express if not.

I won't become a doctor unless I study.

(= I won't become a doctor if I don't study.)

Zero conditional

We form the zero conditional with if + subject + present simple, + subject + present simple.

If you heat water, it evaporates.

Does the liquid change if you mix it?

Usage

We use the zero conditional to talk about facts and situations that are always true.

If astronauts don't exercise in space, they become ill. If you do exercise, you get fit.

The first conditional

We form the first conditional with if + subject + present simple, + subject + will / won't + a verb without to.

if you look outside, you'll see the stars.
If I go out, will I see the meteor shower?

Usage

We use the first conditional to talk about a likely or possible situation in the future.

If it rains later, we won't see the stars.

The second conditional

We form the second conditional with if + subject + past simple, + subject + would / wouldn't + a verb without to.

if i became an inventor, i'd create a robot.
If i learned about gravity, would i pass the test?

Usage

We use the second conditional to talk about present or future situations which are unlikely or unreal.

I'd do some experiments if I went to Mars.

We form wish using the simple past tense to express wishes which are not possible for the present.

Humans wish (that) they could unlock superhuman abilities such as teleport.

They wish (that) they were able to return to the past.

suggest + V-ing

We can use the verb suggest with the -ing form of a verb to show suggestions.

Studies suggest exercising regularly to reduce the risk of heart disease.

Studies suggest consuming a diet rich in fruits and vegetables to improve health.

Reflexive pronouns

Subject pronouns	Reflexive and emphatic pronouns
I	myself
you	yourself
he	himself
she	herself
it	itself
we	ourselves
you	yourselves
they	themselves

We use reflexive pronouns when the subject and the object of the verb are the same.

Mark taught himself to play the guitar.

(subject = Mark; object = Mark)

We use them to talk about reflexive actions.

Alara bought herself a new phone.

They made themselves some breakfast.

We use emphatic pronouns to emphasise the person or thing that does the action.

I spoke to the manager myself.

(= Nobody spoke to the manager for me.)

We finished all the work ourselves.

(= Nobody helped us to finish it.)

Linkers

We use because, but, so and so that to link ideas. We use because to give a reason for an action.

I volunteered at a primary school because I like working with children.

(= reason for first clause)

We use so to explain a result.

l like working with children so I volunteered at a primary school.

(= result of first clause)

We use so that to talk about the purpose of an action.

I'm working hard so that I can pass my exams.

(= in order that I can pass my exams)

We use but to show a contrast of ideas.

He taught himself to paint, but he isn't very good at it.

Defining and non-defining relative clauses

We use a defining clause to provide necessary and important information about the noun or pronoun it modifies. No commas are used in defining clauses.

One of the important aspects which is highly valued in Viêt Nam is family.

We use a non-defining clause to provide additional information about the noun or pronoun it modifies. Commas are used in non-defining clauses.

Water puppetry, which is one unique aspect of Vietnamese culture, came from in the rice fields of the Red River Delta in Viêt Nam.

104 LANGUAGE FOCUS REFERENCE

Adverbial clauses of result so + adjective / adverb + that

We use adjectives or adverbs after so, following by that clause to say what happens or what may happen as a result of the action mentioned in the main clause.

The park is so popular that you can see some of the most talented skaters there.

The grass on Wimbledon's Center Court is maintained so carefully that it's often considered the best grass court in the world.

such + (a / an) + adjective + noun + that

We can also use an adjective and a noun after such, following by that clause to begin an adverbial clause of result.

If the noun is a countable noun, we have to use the article a or an before the adjective and the noun.

The stadium has such a powerful sound system that the music can be heard clearly from every corner. If the noun is an uncountable noun, we do not need to use any article before the adjective and the noun.

It was such bad weather that we had to cancel our camping trip.

Passive: past, present and future

Present passive

We use subject + be in the present simple + the past participle of the verb to form the present passive.

From time to time, old coins are discovered by builders.

We use subject + negative be in the present simple + the past participle of the verb to form the negative present passive.

Most of the time, Roman coins aren't found in very large numbers.

Past passive

We use subject + be in the past simple + the past participle of the verb to form the past passive.

The time capsule was buried in 1890.

We use subject + negative be in the past simple + the past participle to form the negative past passive.

The time capsule wasn't dug up until 2016.

Present perfect passive

We use subject + be in the present perfect + the past participle of the verb to form the present perfect passive.

A Roman villa has been unearthed.

We use subject + negative be in the present perfect + the past participle to form the negative present perfect passive.

The villa hasn't been opened to the public yet.

Future and modal passives

We use subject + will be + the past participle of the verb to form the future passive.

The treasure will be found one day.

We use subject + won't be + the past participle of the verb to form the negative future passive.

The gold coin won't be sold.

We use subject + modal verb + (not) be in the infinitive + past participle to form the passive with modal verbs.

That famous queen must be buried near here.
The body might not be discovered for a long time.

Passive: questions

We use be + subject + past participle to form questions in the present and past passive. The short answer uses the corresponding form of be.

'Is the ancient vase displayed in the museum?'
'No, it isn't.'

'Were the ancient vases unearthed near here?'
'Yes, they were.'

We use have / has + subject + been + past participle to form questions in the present perfect passive. The short answer uses have / has.

'Has the treasure been displayed in the museum?'
'Yes, it has.'

We use Will + subject + be + past participle to form questions in the future passive. The short answer uses will.

'Will the rare coins be displayed here?'

'Yes, they will.'

We can use question words at the beginning of any of the passive questions in the examples above.

When will the rare coins be displayed here?

Prepositions and adverbs of place

Prepositions and adverbs of place tell us where something happens.

Adverbs such as around, down, on and inside usually come after a verb.

We walked around the building.

We walked down to the valley.

Prepositions are usually followed by a noun.

There was a big mural around the wall.

There was an old clock inside the tower.

Reported statements

Direct speech

Present simple

'I feel afraid.'

Present continuous

'We're shopping in town.'

Past simple

'You did the bank robbery.'

Present perfect

'I've seen a burglary before."

will / would

'I'll stop the thief.'

can / could

'We can find the vandals.'

must / have to

'I must catch the hacker.'

Reported speech

Past simple

He said that he felt afraid.

Past continuous

They said that they were shopping in town.

Past perfect

She said that I'd done the bank robbery.

Past perfect

He said that he'd seen a burglary before.

would

She said that she would stop the thief.

They said that they could find the vandals.

She said that she had to catch the hacker.

→ He asked me if I could explain.

'Have they agreed?' (Yes, they have. / No, they haven't.) \rightarrow She asked us whether they'd agreed. With questions that contain a question word, we repeat the question word.

'How old are you?' -> They asked me how old I was.

Usage

We use reported questions to report what someone has asked, without quoting their exact words.

Reported commands, requests, offers and suggestions

We use ask for reported requests and tell for reported commands. We use ask / tell + object + (not) infinitive (with to).

The police officer asked us to report the robbery.

My teacher told me not to interrupt her.

We use offer for reported offers. We use offer + (not) infinitive (with to).

They offered to look for the vandals.

We use suggest that for reported suggestions. We use suggest + that + verb.

He suggested that we watch TV this evening.

Usage

We use reported commands, requests, offers and suggestions to report what someone has said, without quoting their exact words.

Time conjunctions

Time conjunctions are subordinating conjunctions used to connect an action or event to a point in time. Jane fell off her bike when she was riding home from school vesterday.

After we walked around to search for a spot, we finally found a small patch of grass under a tree.

These time conjunctions are usually followed by a subject and a verb.

As soon as we arrived at the park, we realised that it was overcrowded with noisy groups.

Read your book until your teacher comes back.

Some of time conjunctions can be followed by -ing or -ed forms.

After walking around to search for a spot, we finally found a small patch of grass under a tree.

She felt really excited when given the first prize in the English contest.

Usage

We use reported speech to report what someone has said, without quoting their exact words. We use tell and say to report statements. We always use an object after tell.

I told the police that I hadn't seen the burglars. Our neighbours told us that they could help.

We use say when there is no object. The woman said that she'd lost her phone.

NOT The woman said us that she'd lost her phone.

Reported questions

'Why are you calling the police?' they asked. They asked me why I was calling the police.

'Did you see the crime?' the detective asked.

The detective asked us if we'd seen the crime. When we report a question, the word order is different from direct questions. We don't use question marks in reported questions. The rules for changing the verb tenses are the same as with affirmative and negative reported speech. We report yes / no questions with if or whether.

'Can you explain?' (Yes, I can. / No, I can't.)
