A. Paragraph 1 B. Paragraph 2 C. Paragraph 3 D. Paragraph 4

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] Whether you're put off by student loans, you need a break from education, or you're keen on starting work straight after school – going to university isn't the right choice for everyone. [II] And you might be surprised at the career prospects available to those without a degree. [III] If you're considering not going to university, here are a few options of what you could do next. [IV]

If you've just finished school and you don't have any work experience, traineeships and internships are a great way to prepare yourself for your future career. Traineeships usually last from six weeks to six months, and are offered exclusively to 16-23 year olds. Not only do they provide essential work preparation training, they're also the perfect opportunity to gain the practical skills and experience needed to move onto an apprenticeship or job. While internships are similar to traineeships, they are available to people of all ages – and usually focus more on providing practical work experience, rather than guided training and work preparation.

School leaver programmes are becoming a popular choice for A-level students who aren't interested in university, but still want the learning and training that are involved with further education. These programmes are designed to give school leavers the chance to earn a qualification whilst working part-time or full-time (and earning a wage). The exact structure of a school leaver programmes will largely depend on the company you work for. School leaver programmes could last anything from three to seven years, and are most common in industries like accountancy, finance, retail, engineering, and IT.

If you're keen to start work straight away, an entry-level job could be well within your reach. And you may be surprised at what kinds of jobs are available. Whether you want to start a career in education, you're interested in breaking into the marketing industry, or you're passionate about IT – you don't always need extensive experience or qualifications to start a career in your preferred sector. And with many employers providing on-the-job training for new recruits, you'll be able to learn a range of key skills to help you progress within the industry.

TEST 2 – ĐỌC HIỂU

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

Sophia, a humanoid robot created by Hanson Robotics in 2016, has become one of the most well-known robots in the world. Designed to resemble a human woman, Sophia is equipped with AI that allows her to engage in conversations, recognize faces, and display human-like expressions. Her design features cameras embedded in her face to process visual data and interact naturally with people.

What sets Sophia apart is her ability to learn from interactions. Using machine learning, she improves her communication skills, becoming more adept at recognizing and responding to emotions. This ability has made her a popular figure in public appearances, where she discusses topics like technology and human rights.

Sophia gained global attention when she was granted Saudi Arabian citizenship in 2017, becoming the first robot to receive such a status. This milestone sparked debates on the ethical and legal implications of robots in society. Since then, she has appeared at various global events, including the United Nations, representing the potential of AI and robotics.

Although Sophia's abilities remain limited, as her responses are mostly pre-programmed, her development continues to push the boundaries of AI. As technology advances, Sophia may play a key role in shaping the future of human-robot interactions.

Question 1: The word resemble in paragraph 1 could be best replaced by _____.

A. back up B. take after C. save up D. look after Question 2: According to the passage, all of the following are features that Sophia is equipped with EXCEPT _____.

A. Due to her pre-programmed responses, Sophia can hardly grow rapidly in AI.

B. Even though Sophia's abilities are mainly programmed, her progress is still advancing in AI.

C. Albeit pre-programmed Sophia's responses, her progress continues to advance the field of AI.

D. Sophia's development is limited by her pre-programmed responses, but it does not hinder her AI growth.

Question 6: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

A. The development of Sophia requires complete autonomy from human input.

B. Sophia's main function is to deliver meaning speeches at various global events.

C. Sophia is equipped with AI that helps her engage in conversations and recognize faces.

D. Sophia's development makes it difficult to push the boundaries of artificial intelligence.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

The tradition of giving lucky money during Tet, the Vietnamese Lunar New Year, is one of the most cherished customs in Vietnam. Elders give red envelopes containing money to children and younger family members as a symbol of blessings for health, happiness, and success in the coming year. This act is not about monetary value but about sending good wishes and love.

Over time, the tradition has evolved, but its importance remains. For many families, giving and receiving lucky money is a moment to strengthen family bonds. Children are often excited to receive these red envelopes, while elders feel joy in giving their blessings.

[I] In Africa, people celebrate with joy the birth of a new baby. [II] The Pygmies would sing a birth-song to the child. [III] In Kenya, the mother takes the baby strapped to her back into the thorn enclosure where the cattle are kept. [IV]

In West Africa, after the baby is eight days old, the mother takes the baby for its first walk in the big, wide world, and friends and family are invited to meet the new baby. In various African nations, they hold initiation ceremonies for groups of children instead of birthdays. When children reach a certain designated age, they learn the laws, beliefs, customs, songs and dances of their tribes. Some African tribes consider that children from nine to twelve are ready to be initiated into the grown-up world. They may have to carry out several tests.

Masai boys around thirteen years old to seventeen undergo a two-stage initiation. The first stage lasts about three months. The boys leave their parents' homes, paint their bodies white, and are taught how to become young warriors. At the end of this stage, they have their heads shaved and they are also circumcised. The second stage, the young warriors grow their hair long and live in a camp called a manyatta where they practice hunting the wild animals that might attack the Masai herds. This stage may last a few years. When they are ready, they will marry and become owners of large cattle herds like their fathers.

Sweden is destined to become the first country in the world to switch from banknotes and coins to a cashless economy. Only three per cent of transactions in Sweden, are made using cash; the rest is credit cards or mobile phone payments. This compares with 7 per cent in the USA and 9 per cent in other Eurozone countries.

Đăng Ký Khóa Học Online Tại Fanpage: Tài Liệu Khóa Học UniMap

Canada's Chronicle Herald newspaper reported on the extent of Sweden's move away from cash. It wrote: "In most Swedish cities, public buses don't accept cash; tickets are prepaid or purchased with a cellphone text message. A small but growing number of businesses only take cards." It also said churches are only accepting digital donations and not hard currency.

Sweden was the first European country to introduce banknotes in 1661. Today, the Swedish Bankers' Association is just one group in favour of a cashless society. Its security expert Par Karlsson said: "Less cash in circulation makes things safer, both for the staff that handles cash, but also of course for the public."

Bank robberies have decreased from 110 in 2008 to just 16 in 2011. Political corruption has also gone down because of the digital trail generated by electronic transactions. Not everyone supports getting rid of cash. Small business owners see it as another way for banks to make bigger profits. Banks charge from 5 Swedish kronor ($0.80) for every payment made by credit card.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

People are living longer and, in some parts of the world, healthier lives. [I] However, it also presents a significant challenge; longer lives must be planned for. [II] Societal aging may affect economic growth and lead to many other issues, including the sustainability of families, the ability of states and communities to provide resources for older citizens, and international relations. [III] The Global Burden of Disease, a study conducted by the World Health Organization, predicts a very large increase in age-related chronic disease in all regions of the world. [IV] Dealing with this will be a significant challenge for all countries' health services.

Population aging is driven by declines in fertility and improvements in health and longevity. In more developed countries, falling fertility beginning in the early 1900's has resulted in current levels being below the population replacement rate of two live births per woman. Perhaps the most surprising demographic development of the past 20 years has been the pace of fertility decline in many less developed countries. In 2006, for example, the total fertility rate was at or below the replacement rate in 44 less developed countries.

One central issue for policymakers in regard to pension funds is the relationship between the official retirement age and actual retirement age. Over several decades in the latter part of the 20th century, many of the more developed nations lowered the official age at which people become fully entitled to public pension benefits. This was propelled by general economic conditions, changes in welfare philosophy, and private pension trends.

Despite the recent trend toward increased workforce participation at older ages, a significant gap between official and actual ages of retirement persists. This trend is emerging in rapidly aging developing countries as well. Many countries already have taken steps towards much-needed reform of their old-age social insurance programs. One common reform has been to raise the age at which workers are eligible for full public pension benefits. Another strategy for bolstering economic security for older people has been to increase the contributions by workers. Other measures to enhance income for older people include new financial instruments for private savings, tax incentives for individual retirement savings, and supplemental occupational pension plans.

TEST 4 – ĐỌC HIỂU

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

"Earth Hour" is an annual environmental campaign that encourages people around the world to turn off non-essential lights for one hour to raise awareness about climate change and the importance of energy conservation. First launched by the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) in 2007, it has grown into one of the largest and most recognized environmental movements globally, involving millions of participants in over 190 countries.

The campaign takes place every year on the last Saturday of March, from 8:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. local time. During this hour, people and businesses switch off their lights and electrical appliances to reduce energy consumption. However, the goal of Earth Hour goes beyond just saving energy for that hour; it aims to spark global conversations about the urgent need for collective action to combat climate change and promote long-term environmental sustainability.

In addition to turning off lights, Earth Hour has expanded to include activities such as tree planting, clean-up campaigns, and local sustainability programs, organized by communities and environmental organizations. These efforts focus on protecting ecosystems, reducing carbon footprints, and promoting green solutions to environmental challenges, such as waste management and renewable energy use.

Through its simplicity and widespread reach, Earth Hour serves as a powerful reminder of our shared responsibility to protect the planet. The campaign empowers individuals, businesses, and governments to take action and adopt sustainable practices, helping create a more sustainable future for generations to come.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

Diabetes is a chronic disease where the body is unable to properly regulate blood sugar levels. The two main types of diabetes are Type 1, typically diagnosed in childhood or early adulthood, and Type 2, which often develops in adults as a result of poor lifestyle choices such as an unhealthy diet and lack of physical activity.

If left untreated, diabetes can lead to serious health complications, including heart disease, kidney failure, nerve damage, and blindness. High blood sugar levels over time can damage blood vessels, impair circulation, and increase the risk of infections, making wound healing slower and more difficult. Additionally, the disease can affect other organs and systems, making it important to manage blood sugar levels effectively.

Managing diabetes involves lifestyle changes, medication, and regular monitoring of blood sugar. People with Type 1 diabetes rely on insulin therapy, while those with Type 2 can often control the disease through a combination of diet, exercise, and oral medications. In some cases, insulin may also be required for Type 2 diabetes. A balanced diet, rich in vegetables, whole grains, and lean proteins, is essential for controlling blood sugar and preventing complications.

Early detection and prevention are vital in managing diabetes. Regular screenings can help identify risk factors early, and adopting healthy habits, such as eating a balanced diet, staying active, and avoiding smoking, can significantly reduce the risk of developing diabetes.

Question 9: The word regulate in paragraph 1 could be best replaced by _____.

A. prevent B. decrease C. increase D. control

Question 10: The word impair in paragraph 2 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

Question 11: The word those in paragraph 3 refers to _____.

A. diabetes B. people C. blood sugar D. therapies

Question 12: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 3?

A. To manage blood sugar and avoid further health issues, a healthy diet, full of fruits, vegetables, and protein, is crucial.
B. A diet consisting mainly of sugar and fats is very detrimental to control blood sugar and prevent problems.
C. To control blood sugar levels and prevent further complications, we should lead an active lifestyle by exercising regularly.
D. Reducing processed foods is important for maintaining stable blood sugar levels and reducing the risk of complications.

Question 13: According to the passage, all of the following are ways to reduce the risk of developing diabetes EXCEPT _____.

A. avoiding smoking B. leading an active lifestyle
C. eating a balanced diet D. drinking low-sugar beverages

Question 14: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

A. Diabetes can be completely cured through effective medication.
B. Type 1 diabetes is usually diagnosed in children or young adults.
C. Type 2 diabetes cannot be managed without insulin therapy.
D. Wound healing is faster in individuals with high blood sugar levels.

Question 15: In which paragraph does the writer mention the complications caused by untreated diabetes?

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

[I] During a child's early years, parents often look for signs that demonstrate outstanding levels of ability in an activity, field or topic. [II] But what should they actually do when noticing this early potential? [III] The key is to create an environment where their kids can develop a positive relationship with their natural talents. [IV]

Exposing children to their interests is vital for talent development. If they enjoy science, for example, visiting children's science museums can offer hands-on educational experience. Parents can also provide materials for creative play, e.g., give them egg cartons, cardboard boxes, paper towel rolls. When the father of multiple Grammy Award-winning singer-songwriter Ed Sheeran realized that music was the single most important thing in his son's life, he took the initiative and drove him to concerts every week, hoping that he would further discover his potential as he watched them.

Also, studies show that children's skill development grows at a faster rate when they're interacting with, learning from or feeling inspired by those who have similar talents. Iten, a small town in Kenya, is home to many of the best runners in the world, including David Rudisha, who is renowned around the country for his 2012 Olympic gold medal and world record at 800m. "You see your neighbour run and win, interview. When kids see people around them excel in an activity, they feel the urge to raise the bar and be even better.

No one reaches great success on their own. Sometimes, parents must look beyond themselves to meet the needs of their child by finding an outside mentor. It doesn't have to be someone who is much more experienced. Surprisingly, research finds that your kid's most significant influencers are very likely their friends. The relationship between Beatles band members John Lennon and Paul McCartney, for example, was what created the brilliance of these two extraordinarily creative artists. Each provided mentoring, coaching, support and encouragement to the other. They wrote songs together, and each helped fill the musical voids that the other left open.

Finally, keep in mind, that placing too much unhealthy pressure on children can be harmful. When kids feel like each homework assignment is going to make or break their future or that each soccer game could determine if they get a college scholarship, that pressure can have negative consequences.

Question 17: Where in paragraph 1 does the following sentence best fit?

Finland is globally renowned for its exceptional education system, which consistently ranks among the best in the world. The country's approach focuses on equality, high-quality teaching, and student well-being. Finland's education system is unique in that it places less emphasis on standardized testing and more on holistic learning experiences. Teachers are highly respected professionals, required to have advanced degrees, which contributes to the high level of education.

One of the key aspects of Finland's success is its commitment to equal opportunities for all students, regardless of their background or location. The country's educational system strives to minimize disparities and ensure that every student receives the support they need. This focus on equality has helped Finland produce students who perform well academically and socially, with an emphasis on creativity and critical thinking rather than rote memorization.

The Finnish school system also promotes a balanced approach to learning, where students have shorter school days and more time for extracurricular activities. The importance of play and rest in early education is another factor that sets Finland apart. Children are encouraged to explore their interests and develop at their own pace, which fosters a love for learning and nurtures their natural curiosity.

In addition to its national success, Finland's education model has gained international recognition, and many countries have looked to it as a model for reform. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

Maria Alcalá of Madrid speaks for many Mediterranean people when she says that "a meal without olive oil would be a bore." No one knows when the Mediterranean civilizations initially fell in love with olives. That occurred before recorded history.

However, there is evidence that the cultivation of olive trees began in countries around the Mediterranean Sea in approximately 4000 B.C., and 2,000 years after that people in the eastern Mediterranean region began to produce oil from olives. The Mediterranean still accounts for 99 percent of all world olive oil production.

From ancient times until today, the basic process of producing the oil is the same. First, whole olives are crushed. Then, the liquid is separated from the solids. After that, the valuable oil is separated from the water. Many olive growers maintain their ancient traditions and still harvest the olives by hand. "We harvest in the traditional way," says Don Celso, an olive farmer from Tuscany, Italy. "It would be less expensive to do it with machines, but it's more a social thing. Twenty people come to help with the harvest, and we pay them in oil."

Olive oil has had a variety of uses through its long history. In ancient times, olive oil was used as money and as medicine. It was even used during war-heated up and dropped down on attackers. It is still used in religious ceremonies. It is great for protecting the freshness of fish and cheese. There are even olive oil lamps and olive oil soaps. Olive oil enhances the lives of people everywhere. Its benefits, recently confirmed by science, were already understood in ancient times. Mediterranean people are happy to share their secret with the world.

A. Ancient people were aware of its benefits, but science has not yet confirmed them.

B. The benefits of this practice have never been proven, even though ancient people believed in them.

C. It is not until nowadays that science has confirmed the benefits which were once unknown in ancient times.

D. Its benefits, which have only recently been validated by modern science, were already recognized in ancient times.

Question 14: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

A. There is strong evidence suggesting that the first olive trees were planted exactly 4,000 years BC.

B. The exact time that olives became popular among Mediterranean cultures remains unclear.

C. The way the oil is produced today is quite different from that in the past.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions.

[I] According to sociologists, there are several different ways in which a person may become recognized as the leader of a social group in the United States. [II] In other cases, such as friendship groups, one or more persons may gradually emerge as leaders, although there is no formal process of selection. [III] In larger groups, leaders are usually chosen formally through election or recruitment. [IV]

Although leaders are often thought to be people with unusual personal ability, decades to research have failed to produce consistent evidence that there is any category to "natural leaders". It seems that there is no set of personal qualities that all leaders have in common; rather, virtually any person may be recognized as a leader if the person has qualities that meet the needs of that particular group.

Furthermore, although it is commonly supposed that social groups have a single leader, research suggests that there are typically two different leadership roles that are held by different individuals. Instrumental leadership is leadership that emphasizes the completion of tasks by a social group.

Group members look to instrumental leaders to "get things" done." Expressive leadership, on the other hand, is leadership that emphasizes the collective well-being of a social group's member. Expressive leaders are less concerned with the overall goals of the group than with providing emotional support to group members and attempting to minimize tension and conflict among them. Group members expect expressive leaders to maintain stable relationships within the group and provide support to individual members.

Instrumental leaders are likely to have a rather secondary relationship to other group members. They give orders and may discipline group members who inhibit attainment of the group's goals. Expressive leaders cultivate a more personal or primary relationship to others in the group. They offer sympathy when someone experiences difficulties or is subjected to discipline, are quick to lighten a serious moment with humor, and try to resolve issues that threaten to divide the group. As the differences in these two roles suggest, expressive leaders generally receive more personal affection from group members; instrumental leaders, if they are successful in promoting group goals, may enjoy a more distant respect.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

Kindness is choosing to take an action that brings benefit to others, motivated by genuine warm feelings in our heart. It means putting other people's needs before our own, like giving up our seat on a bus to someone else. However, research reveals a surprising fact that sounds paradoxical at first: helping others can also benefit us.

Being kind is a good way to build meaningful relationships or improve existing ones. When you do things that help others, you have the chance to get to know more about people around you or make new friends. For example, joining a team to clean up areas in the local community can give you a shared goal, helping you feel more connected with others. Over time, this network of connection that you build can provide you with emotional support, help you develop a sense of belonging, and reduce feelings of loneliness.

Sometimes, life's challenges can feel unbearable, but doing kind things can shift your focus away from your own problems and help you see things differently. By helping others, you might notice that your own problems aren't as bad as they seemed. Helping someone who has less than you do can also remind you of the good things in your own life, making you feel more positive and hopeful. In fact, research suggests that gratitude and kindness are positively linked with optimism and life satisfaction.

The best thing about kindness is that it spreads and makes everyone happier. When you do something kind, the person who receives your kindness will often want to pass on that kindness to someone else. For example, holding the door open for someone might inspire them to do something nice for another person later, creating a chain of kindness that improves the whole community.

Question 29: In which paragraph does the writer present a contrastive relationship?

A. Paragraph 1 B. Paragraph 2 C. Paragraph 3 D. Paragraph 4

Question 30: In which paragraph does the writer provide evidence to make an idea more credible?

A. Paragraph 1 B. Paragraph 2 C. Paragraph 3 D. Paragraph 4

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] Global K-pop fans are becoming increasingly aware of the environmental impact of their passion, particularly the significant plastic waste generated by albums and merchandise. [II] Album CDs are made from polycarbonate plastic, which is difficult to recycle and can release harmful gases if disposed of improperly. [III] Producing a single CD generates approximately 500 grams of carbon emissions. [IV] With millions of albums sold annually, the collective environmental impact is enormous.

This is especially concerning in an industry where album sales are only increasing, despite the rise of digital streaming. In 2023 alone, over 115 million K-pop CDs were sold, which is a 50% increase from the previous year. This surge is largely due to aggressive marketing strategies that encourage fans to buy albums in bulk. By offering limited-edition photocards, exclusive content, or chances to win access to special events, companies push fans to purchase multiple copies of the same album to increase their chances, discarding the unwanted albums afterward. As a result, it is not uncommon to see piles of thrown-away CDs in public places after fan events.

Activist groups like Kpop4Planet are calling, through protests and petitions, for the industry to adopt more sustainable practices, such as reducing plastic use, turning to green packaging, and speaking against overconsumption. The group believes entertainment companies have a responsibility to reduce their ecological footprint. Some companies have started to acknowledge these concerns. HYBE, the agency behind famous K-pop group BTS, has stated that it is making efforts incorporate eco-friendly materials into its products. However, there is still a lack transparency, with little information available about how they are being carried out.

For fans, the problem remains: They want companies to adopt sustainable practices but remain deeply loyal to their idols, who often have little control over marketing strategies. They hope for solutions that allow them to support their favorite artists while helping to protect the planet.

(Adapted from various sources)

Question 31: In which position of paragraph 1 does the following sentence best fit?

The packaging of the CDs, often made of additional plastics, only further worsens the problem.

A. [I] B. [II] C. [III] D. [IV]

Question 32: The word "collective" in paragraph 1 can be best replaced by _____.

A. detailed B. absolute C. combined D. maximum Question 33: The phrase "in bulk" in paragraph 2 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

A. with little worry B. for small prices C. in small numbers D. in few steps

Question 34: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 2?

A. Fan events are where unwanted CDs are most commonly thrown away.

B. Public places are often littered with thrown CDs following fan events.

C. Thrown-away CDs being sold at fan events is a very common sight.

D. Large number of CDs usually has to be cleaned up at fan events.

Question 35: All of the following are mentioned in paragraph 3 as sustainable practices EXCEPT _____.

A. using less plastic B. using green packaging

C. discouraging overconsumption D. acknowledging concerns

Question 36: Which of the following best summarises paragraph 3?

A. Concerns from activist groups like Kpop4Planet has not yet been sufficiently addressed.

B. More K-pop companies are taking action thanks to activist groups like Kpop4Planet.

C. As Kpop4Planet states, entertainment agencies have a mission to save the environment.

D. There needs to be more transparency when it comes to making green K-pop products.

C. HYBE is the first K-pop agency to commit to making their products more eco-friendly.

D. K-pop fans wants to support their idols and promote sustainability at the same time.

Question 39: Which of the following can most likely be inferred from the passage?

A. The increasing popularity of streaming was supposed to help lower album sales.

B. Chances to join special events is the biggest motivation for K-pop fans to buy albums.

C. More activist groups like Kpop4Planet are being established to push for sustainable practices.

D. Efforts to call for sustainability will not work if K-pop fans continue to be deeply loyal to their idols.

Question 40: Which of the following best summarises the passage?

A. With K-pop companies continuing marketing strategies that result in environmental problems, activitst groups such as Kpop4Planet are taking a range of actions to push for sustainable practices.

B. Realising the extent to which the production and mass purchasing of albums are increasingly harming the planet, activist groups led by K-pop fans have taken action to call for more sustainability.

C. K-pop fans face a difficult choice between supporting their idols and pushing K-pop companies to be more sustainable in producing albums, which has greatly impacted the environment.

In our everyday lives, keeping food fresh is easy: you just put everything into a fridge. For our ancestors in the past, however, preserving food was a challenge. Without modern technologies, they had to rely on many methods to ensure that they have sufficient food to survive long winters when they cannot go out and search for food.

Drying food is among the oldest and simplest ways of preservation. Ancient civilizations understood that moisture facilitates the growth of harmful microbes, which is why they dried food in the sun. Later, other methods, which are based on the same idea, like smoking and using dehydrators were also applied until today.

Early humans also found out that lower temperatures were effective in keeping food fresh. Storing food in cool caves or cold water significantly slowed down the reproduction of microorganisms that spoil food. Over time, root cellars and iceboxes were developed, and eventually, refrigeration revolutionized food preservation.

If you are from Asia, you may also be familiar with fermentation. This is a way to preserve food by turning sugars into alcohol or acids using bacteria or yeast. This not only makes food last longer but also improves its taste, texture, and nutrition. Ancient civilizations used this method to preserve foods like bread, cheese, wine, and soy sauce. Today, people around the world still enjoy fermented foods like kimchi.

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] For years, scientists have been trying to unravel how big the role money plays in our satisfaction with life is. [II] However, most past studies focused only on wealthier, Western countries. [III] Now, a new study is exploring things from a new angle: small rural communities that depend on nature for livelihoods, with no or little cash. Some are Indigenous; most are located in Africa, South America, and Asia. [IV]

For this study, researchers surveyed almost 3,000 people living in 19 small communities around the world about how satisfied they were with their lives on a scale of 0 to 10. Since these communities did not have formal cash systems or keep records of transactions, household income was estimated by looking at the value of items they owned and imagining how much money would have been spent for them.

The result was unexpected. A wide range of life satisfaction levels between individuals, but the patterns were quite different from similar studies in other parts of the world. While Indigenous people with greater personal income were slightly more satisfied with life than those with less income, they were much happier than their Western counterparts overall, even at very low incomes. In fact, people living in these small-scale societies reported an average score of 6.8 out of 10, even though most of them lived on less than the equivalent of $1,000 per year.

Regardless of the reason behind the high satisfaction in these communities, Eric Galbraith, the study's author, thinks we can still learn from their example. Instead of focusing on maximizing income and chasing wealth, we may want to pay closer attention to other findings from the science of happiness to understand what makes for the good life, whether that's being close to nature, strengthening social bonds, or removing inequalities. These small-scale societies show that there are powerful ways to achieve life satisfaction that are not apparent from looking at wealthy societies alone.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

When it comes to marriage the timing is not the same for everyone. Although society usually puts pressure on individuals to get married and start a family early, over the years, people have had many reasons to get married later in life.

All over the world, people of all genders have more access to higher education now more than ever. This results in people choosing to focus on their careers and delaying marriage. Also, the fact that many young people start living alone at an early age make them develop high levels of independence. As a result, they do not see the need to commit to a partner. Women in particular no longer feel the urge to get married fast. They instead spend more of their youthful days pursuing opportunities to become more financially independent.

Financial stability is also a factor. A lot of people in their twenties are not financially stable enough to run a home and fulfil the responsibilities that come with starting a family – after all, simply organizing a wedding is already quite an expensive effort. That much financial pressure can be detrimental to most relationships. As a result, many people decide to wait until they are financially ready before tying the knot.

Nowadays, many couples prefer to live together before getting married, which provides an opportunity to experience marriage life without the commitment and to figure out whether they really suit each other. This is especially made possible as modern society now accepts these sorts of living arrangements.

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] Recently, a conversation about "living room" families and "bedroom" families is being sparked on TikTok. [II] Simply put, a living room family is a family that congregates in the living room, or any common space in the household. [III] A bedroom family, on the other hand, is where kids and parents spend more time in their separate rooms. [IV]

Many users on TikTok are sharing that they grew up in bedroom families and how it affected them. One user, @lacroix_goth, shared memories of her mother often giving her food on a tray outside her bedroom like she was a prisoner." Her bedroom family was also one that made her feel like she had to figure things out for herself. "I have memories of my mom saying 'please leave us alone' and felt that I was limited to my room"

Meanwhile, an increasing number of parents are talking about how learning about living room families is helping them to see things from a new perspective. Instead of feeling overwhelmed by or ashamed of the usual chaos created by having kids and parents in one common area constantly, many of them now consider it to be a sign of their children feeling safe, comfortable, and loved enough to want to spend quality time with them.

However, it is important to acknowledge that it is also perfectly acceptable if kids opt for a little more alone time. Despite sounding negative, there does seem to be value in setting aside a certain amount of time for both kids and parents to spend privately in their own space. After all, things like personality traits and kids' relationships with social media might not fit with the idea of being together in a common space.

At the end of the day, every family dynamic is different, leading to varying definitions of what "family time" can look like. It's not about everyone piling into one room or isolating in separate corners. It's about creating a home where each person feels seen, safe, and connected.

Thanks to modern technology, the world has developed rapidly, and our lives have become more convenient than ever before. For the elderly, however, being surrounded by various types of new technology can be unpleasant, and it is a known fact that many senior citizens have difficulty using computers and smartphones. And there are many different explanations for this.

Obviously, there is a big digital gap. Old adults didn't grow up with smart devices in their hands. Computers were big, phones had wires, and a simple and light laptop nowadays is much more powerful than the best computers from the 80s. The gap in technology becomes bigger every day, and it is extremely difficult for seniors to catch up without any help.

Another barrier is the elderly's natural fear of new technology. As humans, we have been always afraid of the unknown. In many cases, doing something that we've never done before is very risky and uncertain, which terrifies us. For example, some seniors may be afraid of putting any personal information on the Internet and won't want to learn digital skills until they feel comfortable, while others think that because of their limited knowledge, they will break the computer if they do something wrong while playing around with it.

Lack of time is also a big problem. Learning how to use technology (or anything else) means that you have to allocate time for researching and practising as well as being patient and persistent enough to make progress and see the benefits. This, combined with the factors mentioned above, is a major reason why older generations are often not enthusiastic about developing their digital skills.

Australia has a well-organized and well-structured education system. [I] Education starts at the age of five or six, but it may differ by a narrow margin between states. [II] It starts with preschool education which is not compulsory and can be offered within a school or separately. [III] There are a large number of primary and high schools across the country with most of them being public schools. [IV] It is estimated that public schools amount to 60% of scholars as opposed to 40% in private settings. All these education providers must be licensed by the government and must fulfill certain requirements including infrastructure and teaching. Universities, on the other hand, are mainly public institutions.

The Australian education system has established a standard curriculum so all scholars will be given the same quality of education. Although there may be some states in which this curriculum is slightly modified, the changes are not significant. The actual curriculum set out in Australia education system is based on important abilities one must have in his life: Literacy, Numeracy, Information and Communication Technology, Critical and creative thinking, personal and social capability, ethical understanding, and intercultural understanding.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

RoboCup is a football competition that has taken place every year since 1997. But the players are not human; they are robots. The competition's full name is 'Robot Soccer World Cup', and the aim is to create, by the middle of the 21st century, a team of robot footballers that are able to play against and beat the winners of the real World Cup.

In order for robots to play football, robotics companies have had to develop special technologies. A robot can't just run onto the field and start kicking the ball. So each robot is fitted with a webcam which is connected to a computer inside the robot. The robot is able to see where the other players are, where the goal is and, most importantly, where the ball is. They are programmed to make their own decisions and during the match the robots' creators are not allowed to tell them what to do. The robots are, however, able to communicate with other members of their team, via a wireless network.

There is a long way to go before robots will be able to compete against humans. They need to become more intelligent and become able to react more quickly and anticipate the game. But the technologies that are being developed for scoring goals have other uses as well.

It may be possible to develop robots that can be used in searching and rescue, for example, finding people trapped in buildings after earthquakes. They may not be as fun to watch as real footballers, but at least they don't demand enormous salaries!

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] Every day we face challenges at school, work or in our personal lives, and we need to develop the skills to deal with them. [II] Computer skills, for example, are vital for most activities we carry out in our daily lives as well as helping you with studying. [III] When we are young, we are able to learn basic social skills but there are other important skills that can be more challenging to acquire. [IV]

For example, there are many video games which can help us to develop problem-solving skills. Some games help develop patience and perseverance skills by continuing to increase the level of difficulty. They constantly place obstacles in your path until you reach the solution. As a result of playing these games, players can develop confidence, as being able to overcome the obstacles gives you a real sense of achievement. Patience, perseverance and overcoming difficulties are three essential skills in everyday life.

As humans we often learn through mistakes, however some mistakes would be best avoided. Video games can expose you to making decisions in the virtual world by allowing you to choose your characters' actions and then showing you the results of these actions. This may help you make more informed choices in the real world.

However beneficial these games may be, there are things to remember. Too much screen time can isolate you from the real world and if you play multi-player games online, then you need to be sure who you are playing with. It's also vital to make sure that you are not running up a huge bill in games that you pay for online.

Links between schools and video games developers have resulted in more games focused on developing life skills. The not-for-profit organisation, Makerspace, has developed an education programme based around games in conjunction with Minecraft. The programme claims that 30 minutes of video play in the classroom can improve planning skills, memory and motor skills. As well as developing life skills, having excellent computer skills could also help you with a future career. So, play on and learn two valuable lessons at the same time.

(Adapted from Optimise by Malcom Mann and Steve Taylore-Knowles)

B. Developing life skills and mastering computer skills can significantly contribute to your future career.

C. Having excellent computer skills and cultivating life skills are equal in importance for your future career.

D. Life skills and computer skills are both necessary for your future career, but one is more important than the other.

Question 38: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

A. Making errors in a game may help players understand their consequences.

B. Overcoming obstacles in a game helps players recognise their weaknesses.

C. Spending excessive time on playing video games can lead to serious ailments.

D. Makerspace has encouraged schools to increase the hours of students playing games.

Question 39: Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

A. Playing video games in the classroom can be beneficial if there is a time limit.

B. Educational institutions often take little notice of the benefits of playing games.

C. Your addiction to video games can be caused by your preference for living alone.

D. Studying and playing video games simultaneously equip students with vital skills.

Question 40: Which of the following best summaries the passage?

A. Computer skills are unnecessary for personal growth, and only through real-world experiences can life skills be developed.

B. Video games can help develop important life skills like problem-solving, but excessive screen time can have negative effects.

C. Video games should be avoided as they cause more harm than benefit, especially in terms of social isolation and spending money.

D. Playing video games is an essential part of a modern education system, and they can replace traditional methods of learning life skills.

Diwali, known as the Festival of Lights, is one of the most important traditions in India. Celebrated by millions of people each year, it marks the victory of light over darkness and good over evil. The festival has roots in ancient Hindu stories, including the return of Lord Rama to his kingdom after defeating the demon king Ravana. Diwali is a time for joy, family gatherings, and spiritual reflection.

Homes are decorated with oil lamps called diyas and colorful designs made from powdered pigments or flowers, known as rangoli. These decorations are believed to invite prosperity and happiness. Families clean their homes thoroughly before the festival, symbolizing the removal of negativity. At night, the streets glow with lights, fireworks, and the sound of laughter as communities come together to celebrate.

A big part of Diwali is sharing food and gifts. People prepare sweets like laddoos and barfis to exchange with their friends and neighbors. Families also buy new clothes and visit temples to pray for blessings and success. The festival emphasizes generosity and kindness, bringing people closer during this special time.

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] There is a great concern in Europe and North America about declining standards of literacy in schools. [II] Therefore, anything that impedes the development of literacy is a serious matter for us all. [III] So the hunt is on for the cause of the decline in literacy. [IV]

When teachers use picture books, they are simply continuing a long-established tradition that is accepted without question. And for the past two decades, illustrations in reading primers have become increasingly detailed and obtrusive, while language has become impoverished - sometimes to the point of extinction.

Amazingly, there is virtually no empirical evidence to support the use of illustrations in teaching reading. On the contrary, a great deal of empirical evidence shows that pictures interfere in a damaging way with all aspects of learning to read. The artwork is often marvellous, but the pictures make the language redundant, and the children have no need to imagine anything when they read such books. Looking at a picture actively prevents children younger than nine from creating a mental image, and can make it difficult for older children. In order to learn how to comprehend, they need to practise making their own meaning in response to text. They need to have their innate powers of imagination trained. As they grow older, many children turn aside from books without pictures, and it is a situation made more serious as our culture becomes more visual. It is hard to wean children off picture books when pictures have played a major part throughout their formative reading experiences, and when there is competition for their attention from so many other sources of entertainment.

Pictures are also used to help motivate children to read because they are beautiful and eye-catching. But motivation to read should be provided by listening to stories well read, where children imagine in response to the story. Then, as they start to read, they have this experience to help them understand the language. If we present pictures to save children the trouble of developing these creative skills, then we are making a great mistake.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

Depression and anxiety while abroad are more common than people like to admit. It's hard to complain when you've spent the whole day lounging in the European countryside and get to go home to your castle-view new apartment, but for people with depression or anxiety, even the most amazing things can be drowned out by emotion.

Đăng Ký Khóa Học Online Tại Fanpage: Tài Liệu Khóa Học UniMap

It's easy for people who are battling this type of disorder to feel guilty, spoiled, or even confused for being down even when they're "living the high life" abroad, so they keep their feelings to themselves and hide the problem, potentially ruining their time abroad.

Chances are, if you think you're developing depression or anxiety while abroad, you've probably been feeling some of these things for a long time, but nothing has made them surface quite like going abroad does. It's crucial to deal with the problem as you first begin to notice it and take self-care seriously while abroad, as they aren't feelings that are going to be magically fixed.

Illnesses like depression and anxiety are different for everyone, but ultimately you will need to take similar steps to make it more bearable while abroad. Start by talking to your family back home, program director, or school guidance counsellor and have them help you speak with your host family, find a suitable doctor and/or therapist while abroad, and work through any international treatment or insurance issues. You are not the first person to go abroad with baggage, and there are people available and program set up to help those who need it.

Question 23: The word guilty in paragraph 2 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

A. frustrated B. powerless C. ambiguous D. innocent

Question 24: The word who in paragraph 2 refers to _____.

A. amazing things B. people C. emotions D. disorder

Question 25: The word bearable in paragraph 3 could be best replaced by _____.

A. acceptable B. reasonable C. suitable D. inevitable

Question 26: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 3?

A. It is important to handle depression abroad to avoid causing long-term emotional harm to others.

B. Addressing the issue early and prioritizing self-care is essential since these emotions won't resolve themselves.

C. People should focus on self-care abroad because mental health issues can only be treated after returning home.

D. Ignoring the problem while abroad is not a good idea because depression and anxiety will disappear over time.

Question 27: According to the passage, all of the following are steps to make depression and anxiety more bearable abroad EXCEPT _____.

A. Talking to the family back home
B. Finding a suitable doctor and/or therapist

D. Going abroad without any baggage

Question 28: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

A. Depression and anxiety usually disappear after moving abroad to an exciting new location.

B. People with depression often feel comfortable sharing their emotions while living abroad.

C. Experiencing depression or anxiety abroad can be linked to pre-existing issues.

D. Host families abroad are generally unable to provide support for mental health issues.

Question 29: In which paragraph does the writer mention the emotional impact of feeling guilty or spoiled while dealing with depression abroad?

A. Paragraph 1 B. Paragraph 2 C. Paragraph 3 D. Paragraph 4

Question 30: In which paragraph does the writer discuss the importance of seeking help and the steps to manage depression and anxiety while abroad?

A. Paragraph 1 B. Paragraph 2 C. Paragraph 3 D. Paragraph 4

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] Do you feel like your teenager is spending most of the day glued to a phone screen? [II] You're not too far off. [III] A new survey from the Pew Research Center reveals the surprising ways that technology intersects with teen friendships - and the results show that 57 percent of teens have made at least one new friend online. [IV]

While teens do connect with their friends face-to-face outside of school, they spend 55 percent of their day texting with friends, and only 25 percent of teens are spending actual time with their friends on a daily basis (outside of school hallways). These new forms of communication are key in maintaining friendships day-to-day - 27 percent of teens instant message their friends every day, 23 percent connect through social media every day, and 7 percent even video chat daily. Text messaging remains the main form of communication - almost half of survey respondents say it's their chosen method of communication with their closest friend.

While girls are more likely to text with their close friends, boys are meeting new friends (and maintaining friendships) in the gaming world - 89 percent play with friends they know, and 54 percent play with online-only friends. Whether they're close with their teammates or not, online gamers say that playing makes them feel "more connected" to friends they know, or gamers they've never met.

Đăng Ký Khóa Học Online Tại Fanpage: Tài Liệu Khóa Học UniMap

When making new friends, social media has also become a major part of the teenage identity - 62 percent of teens are quick to share their social media usernames when connecting with a new friend (although 80 percent still consider their phone number the best method of contact). Despite the negative consequences - 21 percent of teenage users feel worse about their lives because of posts they see on social media - teens also have found support and connection through various platforms. In fact, 68 percent of teens received support during a challenging time in their lives via social media platforms.

Just as technology has become a gateway for new friendships, or a channel to stay connected with current friends, it can also make a friendship breakup more public. The study reveals that girls are more likely to block or unfriend former allies, and 68 percent of all teenage users report experiencing "drama among their friends on social media."

Question 31: Where in paragraph 1 does the following sentence best fit?

Even more surprisingly, only 20 percent of those digital friends ever meet in person.

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] The Covid-19 pandemic has reshaped our personal relationships in unprecedented ways, forcing us to live closer together with some people and further apart from others. [II] Both in China, which was the first country in the world to go into full lockdown when the virus emerged there, and in Hong Kong - the virus has been brought under control and life has returned to some semblance of normality. [III] Particularly, the pandemic has left some cracks in family relationships. [IV]

Most notably, the high-pressure environment of confinement, combined with the financial stress brought about by a Covid-19 burdened economy, has led to a rise in marital conflict. This is most evident in a spike in divorce rates. In the city of Xi'an in northwest China's Shanxi province, marriage registration offices saw an unprecedented number of divorce requests when they re-opened in March. And it would seem that more extreme cases, these conflicts arising during lockdown have led to a surge in cases of domestic violence. In Hubei province, the heart of the initial outbreak, reported cases of domestic violence increased threefold since the pandemic started.

In Beijing, the women's rights NGO Equality reported a surge in calls to its helpline on issues of domestic violence, after lockdown measures were implemented throughout the country in early February. In Hong Kong, Harmony House, a domestic violence prevention centre and shelter, the number of admissions to the centre rose from 10 in January to 40 in April. Although Hong Kong hasn't gone into full lockdown, pandemic stress, the pressures of working from home, school closures, social isolation have caused a rise in abusive behaviours in families.

Another challenge that families are facing is the increased burden of care as a result of quarantine measures and home-schooling situations. Often, women end up shouldering a greater burden, given typically unequal divisions in household labour, according to Choi. Women spend 2.5 times more time on unpaid care work than men in China, and this will have long-term implications on women's ability to participate in the workforce. "Women workers might be disproportionately affected by Covid-19 related layoffs," said Choi, both because women have to stay at home and take care of their families, but also because both in China and Hong Kong, women are more likely to be employed in the retail sector, including restaurants, hotels and airlines, which have been hit heaviest by the pandemic.

Question 34: The word implemented in paragraph 3 could be best replaced by _____.

A. rejected B. imposed C. absorbed D. investigated

Question 35: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 3?

A. The stresses from the pandemic, working remotely, school closures, and isolation have led to a significant increase in family conflicts in Hong Kong.
B. Although Hong Kong avoided a total lockdown, the pressures of the pandemic have made family situations more tense and take long to resolve.
C. Despite no full lockdown, pandemic challenges like working from home and school closures have increased abusive behaviors in Hong Kong families.
D. Even with a full lockdown, Hong Kong has not completely stopped the rise in abusive behaviours in families due to social isolation and work-from-home pressures.

Question 36: The word their in paragraph 4 refers to _____.

A. women's B. divisions' C. men's D. workers'

Question 37: Which of the following best summarizes paragraph 4?

A. The pandemic has increased women's care responsibilities, making them more vulnerable to layoffs, especially in affected sectors.
B. Women are shouldering more care work during the pandemic, who have to both work remotely and take on extra family responsibilities.
C. Women spend more time on unpaid care work than men, since their jobs are less impacted by the pandemic.
D. Quarantine and school closures have not changed care duties for women, though they potentially affected their workforce participation.

Question 38: Which of the following is NOT MENTIONED according to the passage?

A. In China, women carry more burden than men because of inequitable divisions in family work.
B. After making efforts to reduce domestic violence, the government eventually made a go of it.

[I] Whether you're put off by student loans, you need a break from education, or you're keen on starting work straight after school – going to university isn't the right choice for everyone. [II] And you might be surprised at the career prospects available to those without a degree. [III] If you're considering not going to university, here are a few options of what you could do next. [IV]

If you've just finished school and you don't have any work experience, traineeships and internships are a great way to prepare yourself for your future career. Traineeships usually last from six weeks to six months, and are offered exclusively to 16-23 year olds. Not only do they provide essential work preparation training, they're also the perfect opportunity to gain the practical skills and experience needed to move onto an apprenticeship or job. While internships are similar to traineeships, they are available to people of all ages – and usually focus more on providing practical work experience, rather than guided training and work preparation.

School leaver programmes are becoming a popular choice for A-level students who aren't interested in university, but still want the learning and training that are involved with further education. These programmes are designed to give school leavers the chance to earn a qualification whilst working part-time or full-time (and earning a wage). The exact structure of a school leaver programmes will largely depend on the company you work for. School leaver programmes could last anything from three to seven years, and are most common in industries like accountancy, finance, retail, engineering, and IT.

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] Advocates of the laws and journalists who cover the issue often neglect to ask what will replace plastic bags and what the environmental impact of that replacement will be. [II] People still need bags and use them in various ways in their daily life. [III] The most common substitute, paper bags, may be just as bad or worse, depending on the environmental problem you are most concerned about. [IV]

That is leading to a split in the anti-bag movement. Some bills, like in Massachusetts, try to reduce the use of paper bags as well as plastic, but still favour paper. Others, like in New York City, treat all single-use bags equally. Even then, the question remains as to whether single-use bags are necessarily always worse than reusable ones.

Studies of bags' environmental impacts over their life cycle have reached widely varying conclusions. Some are funded by plastic industry groups, like the ironically named American Progressive Bag Alliance. Even studies conducted with the purest of intentions depend on any number of assumptions. How many plastic bags are replaced by one cotton tote bag? If a plastic bag is reused in the home as the garbage bag in a bathroom waste bin, does that reduce its footprint by eliminating the need for another small plastic garbage bag?

If your chief concern is climate change, things get even muddier. One of the most comprehensive research papers on the environmental impact of bags, published in 2007 by an Australian state government agency, found that paper bags have a higher carbon footprint than plastic. That is primarily because more energy is required to produce and transport paper bags.

"People look at paper and say it's degradable, therefore it's much better for the environment, but it's not in terms of climate change impact," says David Tyler, a professor of chemistry at the University of Oregon who has examined the research on the environmental impact of bag use. The reasons for paper's higher carbon footprint are complex but can mostly be understood as stemming from the fact that paper bags are much thicker than plastic bags. "Very broadly, carbon footprints are proportional to mass of an object," says Tyler. For example, because paper bags take up so much more space, more trucks are needed to ship paper bags to a store than to ship plastic bags.

Question 34: According to the passage, which of the following is NOT mentioned as a factor in the environmental impact of bags?

A. the use of plastic bags as garbage bags

B. the type of bag used for carrying groceries

C. the number of plastic bags replaced by a cotton tote bag

D. the energy required to produce and transport paper bags

Question 35: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 4?

A. Plastic bags require more energy to produce and transport than paper bags.
B. The main reason is that it requires more energy to make and move paper bags.
C. Producing and transporting paper bags takes more energy than making other products.
D. Paper bags have a larger carbon footprint because they require more energy to produce.

Question 36: The word muddier in paragraph 4 could be best replaced by _____.

A. vaguer B. luckier C. uglier D. rarer

Question 37: Which of the following best summarizes paragraph 5?

A. Paper bags are better for the environment than plastic bags due to their degradable nature.
B. Paper bags have a higher carbon footprint than plastic bags due to their thickness and the need for more transportation.

C. The environmental impact of paper bags is mainly because they are heavier and require more resources to produce.

D. Research shows that paper bags are better for the environment than plastic bags, especially in terms of climate change impact.

Question 38: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

A. All environmental studies agree that paper bags are worse for the environment than plastic bags.

B. Paper bags are always better for the environment than plastic bags because they are degradable.

C. The environmental impact of paper bags depends on the specific environmental issue considered.

D. The anti-bag movement is united in its approach to reducing plastic use and promoting alternatives.

Question 39: Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

A. Research shows that paper bags are more environmentally friendly than plastic bags.

B. Reusable bags have been considered the best option for the environment in all cases.

C. The environmental impact of paper and plastic bags can vary based on several factors.

D. Studies on bag impacts always conclude that plastic is undoubtedly worse than paper.

Question 40: Which of the following best summaries the passage?

A. The debate about banning plastic bags often overlooks the environmental costs of alternative options, such as paper bags, and fails to consider the full impact of these substitutes on climate change.

B. Advocates for banning plastic bags argue that reusable bags are the most environmentally friendly option, even though they undeniably bring about several negative consequences for the environment.

C. Paper bags are considered by many to be more environmentally friendly than plastic bags due to their biodegradability, despite studies showing that their carbon footprint is actually higher.

D. All environmental studies on the impact of plastic and paper bags agree that plastic bags have a lower carbon footprint than paper bags, making them the superior choice for the environment.

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

There has always been a problem with teachers being from a different generation to their pupils, particularly older educators. [I] This is because young people become conversant with mobile digital devices, games and social media that didn't exist when their teachers were growing up. [II] Teachers now face pupils using devices and online systems that they don't use themselves, and don't really understand either. [III] The generation gap is more prevalent than ever, but teachers can bridge that gap if they receive the right guidance with appropriate technology. [IV]

Some schools and teachers have particular trouble grasping the role of social media and mobile devices in teenage life. They consider Facebook a threat and warn parents against it at parent-teacher evenings, without realizing that preventing teenagers from using social media like this, or messaging apps such as Snapchat and Instagram, is nearly impossible. Online social media and network gaming are now such an integral part of teenage behavior that any attempt to prize the mobile devices out of the hands of young people is likely to widen the generation gap rather than narrow it.

The generation gap in education isn't just between pupils and teachers – it exists within the staffroom, too. A teaching career can span more than 40 years, and those towards the end of their working life will not have grown up with digital technology, whereas teaching staff in their 20s and 30s could well be "digital natives".

Keeping up with the latest online trend is like a dog chasing its tail; every time you think you've caught up, kids move on. However, it's not beneficial to get fixated on how young people are using social networks that are, in the case of Snapchat, hard for the older generation to understand. The key factor to consider is that today's school students now take for granted that a lot of their communication with their peers will be online, and predominantly using smartphones and other mobile devices. Young people expect their educational experience to be similarly interactive, and partially delivered via these kinds of devices.

Question 31: Where in paragraph 1 does the following sentence best fit?

But the dominance of digital technology has spread that generation gap even wider.

A. [I] B. [II] C. [III] D. [IV]

A. the integration of mobile devices into teenage behavior

B. the confusion over how to handle online gaming

C. the role of social media and mobile devices in teenage life

D. the difficulty of preventing teenagers from using social media

Question 35: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 3?

A. The generation gap in education can be seen between students and teachers, and among the teachers as well.

B. The generation gap in education between teachers and students is more evident than that within the staffroom.

C. The generation gap in education is mainly present between the staff and the students.

D. Teachers and students experience a generation gap, but it does not affect their interactions.

[I] In the 1990s, William Janssen was impressed by the simple rooftop solar heating systems in Thailand, where energy from the sun was absorbed by a plate to heat water for homes. [II] This device harnesses solar power to purify water, making it useful for those without access to clean drinking water. [III] Janssen's innovation builds upon the basic idea he encountered during his travels in Southeast Asia. [IV]

The Desolenator operates as a mobile desalination unit that can take water from different places, such as the sea, rivers, boreholes, and rain, and purify it for human consumption. It is particularly valuable in regions where natural groundwater reserves have been polluted, or where seawater is the only water source available. Janssen saw that there was a need for a sustainable way to clean water for both the developing and the developed countries when he moved to the United Arab Emirates and saw large-scale water processing.

The Desolenator can produce 15 liters of drinking water per day, enough to sustain a family for cooking and drinking. Its main selling point is that unlike standard desalination techniques, it doesn't require a generated power supply; just sunlight. It measures 120 cm by 90 cm, and it's easy to transport, thanks to its two wheels. Water enters through a pipe and flows as a thin film between a sheet of double glazing and the surface of a solar panel, where it is heated by the sun. The warm water flows into a small boiler (heated by a solar-powered battery) where it is converted to steam. When the steam cools, it becomes distilled water. The device has a very simple filter to trap particles, and this can easily be shaken to remove them.

A recent analysis found that at least two-thirds of the world's population lives with severe water scarcity for at least a month every year. Janssen says that by 2030 half of the world's population will be living with water stress - where the demand exceeds the supply over a certain period. It is important that a sustainable solution is brought to the market that is able to help these people,' he says. 'Many countries don't have the money for desalination plants, which are very expensive to build. They don't have the money to operate them, they are very maintenance intensive, and they don't have the money to buy the diesel to run the desalination plants, so it is a really bad situation."

Question 31: Where in paragraph 1 does the following sentence best fit?

Two decades later, he drew inspiration from this concept and developed it into a portable device.

A. By 2030, half of the world's population will experience a constant surplus of water, with enough supply for all their needs.
B. By 2030, half of the world's population will face situations where water may be unevenly distributed, but supply matches demand.
C. By 2030, half of the world's population will face a shortage of water, where the amount of available water will be insufficient to meet needs.
D. By 2030, half of the world's population will live in regions with a consistent water supply, though it may be affected by several demand changes.

Question 38: Which of the following is NOT TRUE according to the passage?

A. The Desolenator can be used in different locations, as it has wheels.
B. The Desolenator could be useful device to purify water in contaminated groundwater reserves.
C. According to Janssen, many people in the world will face water stress in the future.
D. Some affluent countries have made sustainable efforts to help their inhabitants have access to clean water.

Question 39: Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

A. Virtually everyone can easily understand the operation process of the Desolenator.
B. Every household in Thailand has installed solar heating systems.
C. Some countries can't afford the upkeep of desalination plants, let alone build them.
D. Only those in underdeveloped countries need access to clean water.

Question 40: Which of the following best summaries the passage?

A. Inspired by his travels in Southeast Asia, William Janssen developed the Desolenator, a portable and efficient water purification device.
B. The Desolenator is a solar-powered device that can purify water from various sources, providing a sustainable solution to water scarcity across the globe.
C. Water scarcity is a growing global issue, but the Desolenator offers a promising solution, which will entirely address a lack of clean water in the future.
D. The Desolenator, a solar-powered water purification device, may turn out to be not that effective in addressing global water challenges in the long run.

Sir Sterling Moss, a much-loved and respected former racing driver, passed away at the age of 90. Moss, who was widely acknowledged as one of the greatest drivers never to have won the Formula One world title, died at his London home in the early hours of Sunday morning following a long illness. Born in 1929, Moss was hugely admired for his skill behind the wheel, having a remarkably successful career in sportscar racing at the same time as F1.

Lewis Hamilton, a six-time Formula 1 world champion, was among many current and former drivers to pay tribute to the man. The three-time world champion Jackie Stewart, who collected Moss's autograph as a youngster and went on to become godfather to his son Elliot, said that Moss "walked like a racing driver should walk, he talked like a racing driver, he looked like a racing driver and he set a standard that I think has been unmatched since he retired".

Hamilton also added on Instagram: "I think it's important that we celebrate his incredible life and the great man he was. To be honest, it was such a unusual pairing, our friendship. Two people from massively different times and backgrounds, but we clicked and ultimately found that the love for racing we both shared made us comrades."

Many people admired Moss as a racer who enjoyed life to the full and embraced every aspect of a racing driver's lifestyle. He had a determination to take victory at every attempt, which he admitted was more important than titles. His former team Mercedes said on Twitter: "Today the sporting world lost not only a true icon and a legend, but a gentleman. The team and the Mercedes Motorsport family have lost a dear friend. Sir Stirling, we'll miss you."

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

In this modern world where closed-circuit television (CCTV) cameras are everywhere and smartphones are in every pocket, the routine filming of everyday life is becoming pervasive. [I] Other public-facing agencies such as schools, councils and hospitals are also experimenting with cameras for their employees. [II] Private citizens are getting in on the act too: cyclists increasingly wear headcams as a deterrent to aggressive drivers. [III] As camera technology gets smaller and cheaper, it isn't to envisage a future where we're all filming everything all the time, in every direction. [IV]

Would that be a good thing? There are some obvious potential upsides. If people know they are on camera, especially when at work or using public services, they are surely less likely to misbehave. The available evidence suggests that it discourages behaviours such as vandalism. Another upside is that it would be harder to get away with crimes or to evade blame for accidents.

But a world on camera could have subtle negative effects. The deluge of data we pour into the hands of Google, Facebook and others has already proved a mixed blessing.

Đăng Ký Khóa Học Online Tại Fanpage: Tài Liệu Khóa Học UniMap

Those companies would no doubt be willing to upload and curate our body-cam data for free, but at what cost to privacy and freedom of choice?

Body-cam data could also create a legal minefield. Disputes over the veracity and interpretation of police footage have already surfaced. Eventually, events not caught on camera could be treated as if they didn't happen. Alternatively, footage could be faked or doctored to dodge blame or incriminate others.

Of course, there's always the argument that if you're not doing anything wrong, you have nothing to fear. But most people have done something embarrassing, or even illegal, that they regret and would prefer they hadn't been caught on film. People already censor their social media feeds - or avoid doing anything incriminating in public - for fear of damaging their reputation. Would ubiquitous body cams have a further chilling effect on our freedom?

The always-on-camera world could even threaten some of the attributes that make us human. We are natural gossips and backbiters, and while those might not be desirable behaviours, they oil the wheels of our social interactions. Once people assume they are being filmed, they are likely to clam up.

The argument in relation to body-cam ownership is a bit like that for guns: once you go past a critical threshold, almost everyone will feel they need one as an insurance policy. We are nowhere near that point yet but we should think hard about whether we really want to say "lights, body cam, action."

Think about the last test you took. How much of what you learned for the test do you still remember? [I] Many people take tests to pass a course or get a promotion, but they often forget the information afterward. [II] These tests usually involve multiple-choice questions, and people often study to increase their scores, not to learn important information. [III] In fact, educators are divided on whether these kinds of tests are the most effective way to assess a person's abilities. [IV]

Those who support such tests say they are the only way for educators and employers to compare people based on their test scores. However, there are people trying to reform this system. They believe that standard tests aren't the best way to measure a person's ability. These reformers also believe that intelligent people are not always good at taking tests or memorizing facts. A multiple-choice test cannot always tell what people have learned, or whether they can apply that knowledge in the future.

Reformers believe that other types of evaluation achieve better results. Tests that contain a mix of written and spoken questions give a more complete assessment of what the person is capable of. A portfolio, or a collection of work done throughout a course, can show how much the student has improved individually. Group interview, where a group of people are interviewed at the same time, can also be useful for employers, since they show how people interact with others.

Alternative educational institutions such as Montessori and Waldorf schools don't believe that education should be focused on testing. At these schools, the classroom is very relaxed and "free" with students learning from each other as much as they learn from teachers. Some of these schools even allow students to choose what they study. Teachers create activities designed to let students show their abilities or knowledge of a certain subject. In these schools, the focus is on learning by experiencing and doing things.

The debate on testing continues, and educators have yet to find a perfect method of evaluating learning. Until that day comes, old test methods will be used and new test methods will continue to develop. But one thing's for sure, testing will continue to play an important part in our lives - so study hard!

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

Hanoi, Vietnam's capital, is grappling with poor air quality due to rapid urbanization, industrialization, and heavy traffic. The high volume of vehicles, along with the burning of coal and wood, worsens pollution, especially in the winter months. This has led to increasing concerns about the city's air quality.

The Air Quality Index (AQI) is often used to measure pollution levels in Hanoi, with particulate matter (PM2.5) being the main culprit. These fine particles pose serious health risks, particularly for vulnerable groups such as children, the elderly, and those with respiratory issues. The city's AQI frequently exceeds safe levels, making it one of the most polluted cities in Southeast Asia.

In response, the local government has implemented measures such as promoting electric vehicles and cleaner energy sources. However, these efforts have yet to significantly improve air quality. Many residents now rely on masks for protection, while some have even relocated to avoid the harmful effects of pollution.

The poor air quality in Hanoi affects both public health and the overall quality of life. With the city's growing population, addressing air pollution through sustainable urban planning and stronger environmental policies is crucial for a healthier future.

Read the following passage about and mark the letter A, B, C, D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

[I] Normally, parents have the responsibility to care for their children. [II] But sometimes these roles, a child finds themselves acting as a caregiver for their parents and other family members. [III] This is known as "parentification," and it can have long-lasting negative mental effects. [IV]

The reasons behind parentification are diverse. "It typically unfolds because the parent is experiencing some form of physical or emotional impairment that impacts their ability to assume the role of caretaker," explains Dr. Aude Henin at the Massachusetts General Hospital. This can be addiction, disability, or a mental or physical illness. Other times, parents are thrown into the parentification process by life events. For example, if one parent dies, the other might need their child to step up and replace the late parent. Financial hardship could also prompt a parent to work more, leaving less time for household duties. Finally, some parents are simply neglectful.

According to experts, there are two types of parentification: emotional and instrumental. Children who experience emotional parentification might have to give advice on grown-up situations, de-escalate household arguments, or comfort their siblings during difficult times. Crucially, they usually don't get the same emotional support back from parents and have to learn to push their own feelings away to worry about other family members. Meanwhile, instrumental parentification involves children being put in charge of practical duties like cooking meals, paying bills, or booking appointments, and these tasks might be above their ability or comprehension.

Managing adult responsibilities is stressful, so it's no surprise that children can be negatively affected by the pressure. Because parentified kids don't get validation about their feelings, they're forced to deal with them alone, which often leads to self-blame and self-doubt. Parentification has also been associated with aggressive or disruptive behaviour, academic problems, substance use, and social difficulties.

Children who experienced parentification don't necessarily require treatment. But if they're suffering from any mental issues, it might help to see a mental health professional. "It's also important to approach the situation without judgment of the child or parent, and to recognize that the family is typically doing the best that they can to cope with the situation, even if the outcome is not healthy", says Dr. Henin.
