Many parents may feel that social networking sites are a waste of their children's time. However, new research claims that the communication opportunities provided by social networking encourage young people to explore their interests, develop technical skills, and work on new forms of self-expression. The three-year study carried out by a University of California research team that interviewed over 800 teens and conducted over 2000 hours of online observations. It found that social networking helps teenagers learn the social and technical skills they need to be knowledgeable citizens in the digital age.

23. Teens spend an average of 2000 hours online annually.
24. Most teenagers are said to use social networking sites for interacting with existing friends.
