In the past, Vietnamese people lived in close-knit communities. Villages were surrounded by bamboo hedges, and neighbors knew each other very well. Most people were farmers, and their lives revolved around agriculture. Festivals were important events where villagers gathered to pray for good crops and play traditional games. Today, urbanization has changed the face of Vietnam. Many people have moved to cities to seek better job opportunities and a modern lifestyle. High-rise buildings have replaced rice fields in many areas. Technology has also changed how people communicate; face-to-face gatherings are sometimes replaced by video calls or social media messages. Despite these changes, Vietnamese people still cherish their traditional values. Lunar New Year (Tet) remains the most important holiday for family reunions. Respect for elders and ancestors continues to be a core part of the culture.

Dong Ho painting village is located in Bac Ninh province. It is famous for its unique folk paintings, which reflect the traditional life of Vietnamese people. The artisans use natural materials to make the paper and colors. For example, the paper is made from the bark of the "Do" tree, and the colors come from burnt bamboo leaves, brick powder, or flowers.

However, the craft is facing challenges. Modern printing technology has made mass-produced pictures cheaper and more colorful. As a result, fewer people buy traditional paintings. Many young people in the village prefer working in factories to making paintings because the income is more stable. To preserve this heritage, the government and local artisans are trying to introduce Dong Ho paintings to tourists and international markets.

Question 19: What is the main idea of the passage?

- A. How to make Dong Ho paper.
- B. The location of Bac Ninh province.

Climate change is a global issue that affects every living thing on Earth. One of the main causes is the increase in greenhouse gases, such as carbon dioxide, which trap heat in the atmosphere. This leads to global warming, melting ice caps, and rising sea levels.

The consequences are serious. Many animals are losing their natural habitats. For example, polar bears are struggling to survive as the ice melts. Extreme weather events like storms, floods, and droughts are becoming more frequent and severe.

To fight climate change, we must act now. We can start by using renewable energy sources like solar and wind power instead of fossil fuels. Planting more trees is also essential because they absorb carbon dioxide. Small actions, such as saving electricity and reducing waste, can make a big difference if everyone contributes.

Question 24: What is the best title for the passage?

A. The Life of Polar Bears. B. The Causes and Effects of Climate Change.
C. How to Plant Trees. D. Solar Energy vs. Wind Energy.

Virtual Reality (VR) is changing the way we learn. Instead of just reading about the solar system in a textbook, students can put on a VR headset and "travel" to Mars. They can see the red planet up close and explore its surface. This makes learning much more engaging and memorable.

In biology classes, VR can take students inside the human body to see how the heart pumps blood. In history lessons, they can visit ancient Rome or walk through the streets of old Hanoi.

However, VR devices are still quite pricey, so not all schools can afford them. There is also a concern that using VR for too long might cause eye strain or dizziness. Despite these challenges, many experts believe that VR will be a common tool in classrooms in the near future.

Question 19: What is the main idea of the passage?

- A. The cost of VR headsets.
- B. How to travel to Mars.
- C. The application of VR in education.
- D. The dangers of eye strain.

Tablets and laptops are becoming popular in classrooms. They offer many benefits for learning. Firstly, these devices are portable, so students can carry them easily unlike heavy backpacks full of books. Secondly, they allow quick access to the internet. Students can search for information, watch educational videos, and download digital textbooks in seconds.

However, using electronic devices in class also has downsides. Students might get distracted by games or social media instead of listening to the teacher. Also, looking at a touchscreen for too long can cause eye strain.

To solve these problems, teachers and parents need to guide students on how to use technology wisely. Some schools have rules that students can only use devices for learning purposes. If used correctly, technology can be a powerful tool to help students widen their knowledge.

The environment is facing many serious problems, and one of them is deforestation. Trees are being cut down to make room for farming, urban development, and mining. This loss of forests has negative effects on our planet. Firstly, forests are the habitat of millions of animals and plants. When trees disappear, many species lose their homes and may become extinct. Secondly, trees play a vital role in absorbing carbon dioxide. Without them, the level of greenhouse gases increases, leading to global warming and climate change. To solve this problem, we need to protect existing forests and plant more trees. Governments should have strict laws against illegal logging. Individuals can also contribute by using less paper and supporting eco-friendly products. Saving the forests means saving our own future.

The traditional Vietnamese family is changing. In the past, "three generations under one roof" was the norm. Grandparents, parents, and children lived together in an extended family. They shared housework, meals, and stories. The elders passed down values and traditions to the younger ones. However, with urbanization, the nuclear family (parents and children only) has become more common. Young people move to cities for better jobs and education. They live in apartments and lead busy lives. Consequently, family meals are less frequent, and the connection between generations may become weaker. Despite these changes, family remains the most important part of Vietnamese culture. People still gather on special occasions like Tet to visit their ancestors and reunite with relatives. The love and respect for family members never change.

Question 24: What is the best title for the passage?

A. Vietnamese Food. B. Changes in Vietnamese Families.

C. Life in the City. D. How to Celebrate Tet.

Question 25: In the past, who lived together in a family?

A. Only parents and children. B. Grandparents, parents, and children.

C. Only friends. D. Neighbors.

Question 26: The word "norm" is closest in meaning to _____.

A. standard or common thing B. strange thing C. mistake D. law

Question 27: Why do young people move to cities?

A. To avoid family. B. For better jobs and education.

C. Because they dislike the countryside. D. To live alone.

Question 28: Which statement is NOT true according to the passage?

A. Nuclear families are becoming more common. B. People never visit their relatives anymore.

C. Family is still important in Vietnamese culture. D. Family meals are less frequent now.

Electronic devices have become an essential part of our daily lives, especially for teenagers. Smartphones, tablets, and laptops offer many benefits for both entertainment and education.

For entertainment, teens can listen to music, play games, and watch movies anywhere. Social media apps help them stay connected with friends and family.

In education, these devices are powerful tools. Students can search for information online, access digital textbooks, and join online courses. Learning apps can make difficult subjects more interesting and interactive.

However, using electronic devices too much can lead to problems. Many teenagers suffer from eye strain and lack of sleep because they spend hours looking at screens. Some also become addicted to games and neglect their studies. Therefore, it is important to use technology wisely and maintain a balance between online and offline activities.
