The Happy Hands Club started at Linh's school in September. At first, only twelve students joined. Now it has twenty members. They meet every Friday afternoon in the art room. Their teacher helps them make useful things from old materials.

Last month, the students turned old T-shirts into shopping bags. Linh worked with a new student called Mai. Mai could sew well, but she was too shy to share her ideas. Linh asked her to explain each step to the group. The other students listened and thanked her. Mai became more confident after that activity.

The club does not sell its products. Members give the bags to their families and encourage them to use fewer plastic bags. Next month, they will make pencil holders from empty tins. Linh likes the club because she can learn practical skills and make new friends. She also spends less time on her phone on Friday afternoons.
